HENDERSON

$2M TO SWISS BANKS

Gov't Firm Gave Kickbacks—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he was told 3½ years ago that a government-owned company paid nearly $2 million in kickbacks to customers either in cash or in numbered Swiss bank accounts.

But the prime minister said that although he passed the information along to cabinet colleagues he has no evidence that any action was ever taken.

A letter former auditor-general Maxwell Henderson sent to Trudeau in March, 1973, says Crown-owned Polymer Corp. Ltd. agreed to bill some European customers "at inflated rates" and then remit the difference to customers or their representatives in Switzerland. The letter was tabled in the Commons by Trudeau.

The prime minister, under intensive questioning in the Commons over allegations that government companies bribed foreign firms to get sales, said he passed the auditor-general's comments on to Charles Drury, then president of the treasury board.

Trudeau conceded under questioning that in the 3½ years since then he has not pursued the matter and there is no record it was ever resolved.

A Swiss subsidiary of Polymer agreed to bill certain European customers "at inflated prices" in order to reduce tax liabilities in their own countries and avoid their countries' foreign exchange control regulations, where they exist, the letter says.

Henderson told the prime minister that the extent to which the Crown corporation might be "contingently liable for aiding and abetting such transactions largely depends, of course, on whether the customers concerned are apprehended by their respective national authorities."

While it might be possible to defend the actions from a corporate standpoint, he said, publicity surrounding any charges against a Crown corporation "could have serious and undesirable consequences."

A company spokesman later denied the kickback charge and they were instead "volume discounts."

The company rejects suggestions "there was anything illicit or illegal" in its actions, he said.

Earlier in the day, Trudeau said that only days after getting the letter, he and the minister involved — the then treasury board president Charles Drury — sought an explanation of what the prime minister described as "questionable invoicing practices."

A spokesman for Drury said the former minister will not be available to comment until Tuesday.

Henderson is expected to be called before the Commons public accounts committee to outline what evidence he has that bribes were paid.

He will also be asked why the issue of the rebates was handled in a private letter to the prime minister rather than in his annual report. The auditor-general is an employee of Parliament and is supposed to report to the Commons.

Committee chairman Allan Lawrence (PC — Northumberland-Durham) says he will seek permission to subpoena documents and ministers to get to the bottom of the issue.

After Henderson said in a newspaper interview that he had reported cases of bribery by government-owned companies, the prime minister first told reporters — and repeated in the Commons — that he had been unable to turn up any such communication from Henderson.

T. C. Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) said the whole matter smacked of illegality and immorality "and somebody could be charged with aiding and abetting fraud."

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said it was a phony argument for Trudeau to say that only questionable accounting procedures were involved because "there's also a clear question of possible illegality."

GRITS THIRD IN POLL

A sample survey of voters in B.C. shows the federal Liberals have slipped to third place in popularity, behind the New Democratic Party, while Progressive Conservatives maintain a strong lead.

Dan Koenig, sociologist at the University of Victoria, said 599 replies from a representative sample of people on the federal voters lists across the province show 44 per cent supporting the federal Conservatives.

The replies, received in September and October, prior to the current controversy over the auditor-general's report, show 18.4 per cent support the NDP while the Liberal backing has dipped to 15.9 per cent.

The latest survey is one in a series over the past four years asking, among other questions: "if another federal election were held today, for which political party's candidate would you vote?"

In April this year the results were: PCs 44.2; Liberals 20; NDP 17.7; Social Credit 5.4 and uncommitted 12.7.

In February the results were: PCs 36.2; Liberals 24.4; NDP 16.3; Social Credit 5.8 and uncommitted 17.4.

One Dead, Four Hurt After Wild Car Chase

One youth is dead and four others are in hospital after a wild drinking and car-stealing escapade ended in a two-car collision near Nanaimo Thursday morning.

Nanaimo RCMP said the dead youth and three companions suspected of ramming a stolen car through the Langford liquor store earlier in the day, were travelling in a stolen car that collided with another vehicle eight miles north of Nanaimo at 9 a.m.

One person in the other vehicle was taken to hospital with a suspected broken arm while two passengers escaped injury.

Police are withholding all names pending notification of next of kin. All of the youths in the car that was chased are 17 or 18 years old.

A spokesman said the car containing the four youths had been pulled over in Nanaimo after it sped through a police radar trap. As the officer approached, the car suddenly took off.

A chase at speeds up to 80 miles an hour ensued but the officer decided to back off because of the erratic way the youth's car was being driven.

"The officer radioed in he was abandoning pursuit," the spokesman said. "He said he was afraid if he kept up the chase someone would get killed."

The spokesman said the police car was following well behind with it's red-light flashing, when the pursued vehicle swerved over into the oncoming lane as it rounded a curve and skidded into the other car.

Police said the car being chased had been reported stolen from a garage in Cobble Hill earlier in the morning.

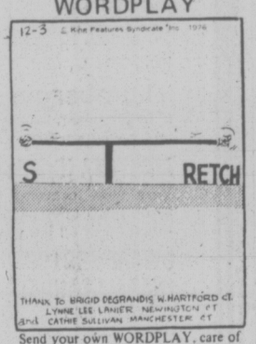

Police also found another car which had been reported stolen from Victoria earlier in the day.

NO INCREASE FOR AUTOPAC

WINNIPEG (CP) — There will be no general rate increases in 1977 for vehicles or drivers, Peter Burtniak, minister responsible for the Manitoba Public Insurance Corp., announced today.

The minister said the past fiscal year was one of the best in the five-year history of the compulsory automobile insurance operation, known as Autopac, and a surplus of about $14 million is anticipated.

AIRLINE BILKED

MONTREAL (CP) — Using a flaw in Air Canada's ticketing system, a 24-year-old employee bilked the company of at least $115,000 by illegally selling tickets at reduced prices, police said today.

Det.-Sgt. Roger Ratelle of the Montreal police fraud squad said the employee, working at Dorval airport, sold tickets for prices ranging from half to 90 per cent of their value.

After selling a ticket, he would destroy all evidence of a transaction and keep the money, the detective said, adding that the employee also gave some tickets away to friends.

Halloween Shooter Fined $100

Shooting into the air is no way to celebrate Halloween, a Saanich man learned Thursday when he was fined $100 in Victoria provincial court and banned from possessing firearms.

Judge Blake Allan fined Reginald William Hayward, 36, of 85 Cadillac, for firing five shots into the air from the back porch of his house.

One of the shots from the .38-calibre revolver hit a six-year-old boy in the arm after travelling about six-tenths of a mile.

The boy had been out collecting sweets in the 3100-block Wascana when the bullet hit.

Hayward told court he realized that he had done a stupid thing and he had already told Saanich police he didn't want anything to do with that revolver from now on.

He then issued two separate orders, one prohibiting Hayward from owning a firearm, other than hunting rifles, for 12 months and another turning the revolver over to Saanich police.

The incident, he said, showed how badly gun control laws are needed.

Strong Earthquake Rocks Northern California Coast

Times News Services

A strong earthquake rumbled through a broad coastal zone of northern California early today, the University of California seismographic laboratory reported. There were no immediate reports of injuries or damage.

The tremor measured 5.8 on the Richter scale of quake intensity, the laboratory said.

A spokesman said the quake occurred at 12:20 a.m. with an epicentre at Ferndale, 15 miles south of Eureka.

An earthquake of 5 on the scale can cause considerable damage in populated areas and 6 can cause severe damage. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 registered 8.25 on the Richter scale.

In Turkey, meanwhile, relief workers struggled through snow and over destroyed roads today to help thousands of earthquake victims. Local officials said 3,027 bodies had been recovered in the area and expressed fear that the death toll may approach 4,000.

The grief-striken survivors of Muradiye spent a second night outdoors in sub-zero temperatures. Mevlut Sivasoglu, the township's acting governor, said tents, blankets and fuel were desperately needed to ease the suffering of the survivors, many of them injured.

Lang Sees No Wrong

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Transport Minister Otto Lang says he saw nothing wrong in seeking passage to Europe on an Armed Forces plane for his Scottish nanny, but Defence Minister Barney Danson thought otherwise and asked his colleague to drop such plans.

Danson told reporters Thursday he "suggested to Lang that the nanny travel another way" when advised that she was booked on such a flight to Scotland for last night.

Lang's wife Adrien said she is fed up.

"This appears to be get Otto Lang year," she said Thursday. "But I didn't think it was going to last all year.

"I have had it," she declared.

The Toronto Sun disclosed Wednesday that Lang, already under fire for spending $750,000 over three years in free government flights, planned to send the Scottish nanny back home by DND aircraft.

The Lang's had brought her to Canada the same way about a year ago.

A replacement was to be flown to Canada on a later free defence department flight.

The end result of the incident is that the nanny, 21-year-old Elizabeth MacGillivray, was to leave via Air Canada and Lang was chastized once more in the Commons for his use of government planes.

The minister said having a nanny to care for his children, the Langs have seven, "frees us to do more work and put in extra long hours."

"For that reason," he added, "I felt it was fair in this case."

Danson said that troops on duty have first priority aboard military flights overseas.

Dollar Drops

Times News Services

Bankers in Montreal said today that the decline of the Canadian dollar to below parity with the U.S. one for the first time in 11 months reflects a growing investor concern over the Canadian economy.

The decline started Thursday when the Canadian dollar hit $0.9998 at the close. Today at noon in Montreal, it was trading at $0.9955.

The slide will continue until the Canadian dollar is trading at 97 cents U.S., according to bank estimates in Montreal. New York brokers fear the slide could carry on until the Canadian dollar is only worth 86 cents U.S.

Dealers in the U.S. said there was steady commercial Canadian dollar selling Thursday which they described as exceptional for the U.S. Thanksgiving Day holiday.

U.S. analysts also blamed lower yields for Canadian treasury bills and Prime Minister Trudeau's speech Wednesday night as other reasons for the higher U.S. dollar.

They said Mr. Trudeau's comments on the Quebec election did little to inspire confidence in the Canadian government.

UIC Premiums Cut 9%

OTTAWA (CP) — The amount of money people pay into the government's unemployment insurance program will be reduced Jan. 1 by nine per cent, Manpower Minister Bud Cullen announced Thursday.

Cullen said the reduction will be $250 million.

The announcement came as Statistics Canada reported the amount paid out in unemployment insurance for the first nine months of 1976 totalled $2.607 billion, up six per cent from the total for the same period last year.

With unemployment continuing at high levels and despite a program designed to cut abuses, it is likely benefits paid will set a record again this year. Last year, benefits totalled more than $3 billion.

Net amount of benefits paid in September was $217 million, down 11 per cent from August and eight per cent from Sepember, 1975.

Cullen said the current weekly premium rate for employees will be reduced to $1.50 from $1.65 for every $100 of insured earnings.

The premium weekly rate for employers will be reduced to $2.10 from $2.31 per $100 insured earnings.

The government can afford to reduce the premiums because of savings within the unemployment insurance system. Recent changes have knocked some unemployment insurance recipients off the list, he said.

Force Won't Save Canada: PM

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The will of the people to live together is the only safeguard of Canadian unity and neither force nor referendums will alter that, according to Prime Minister Trudeau.

If the people don't want to stay together, their minds will not be changed by force or even by an act of God, Trudeau told a news conference Thursday.

Relaxed and frank, the prime minister explored the scenarios made possible by the election of the Parti Quebecois and imparted the message that the fate of Canada will not be resolved by the numbers game of referendums.

Trudeau also repeated his arguments against separatism saying that dividing a country like Canada was "logically unthinkable" and "politically unworkable."

There was a certain logic to a suggestion that Ottawa hold a national plebiscite if a Quebec referendum in two years produced a vote for separatism, he added.

Although "hypothetical", the situation would demand that the other provinces be asked what they felt about unity and the place of Quebec in Canada.

It was "like a marriage," you have to ask both parties if they want a divorce.

If a Quebec referendum produced a huge majority in favor of separation, it would be "constitutionally illegal," he said, adding that this wasn't the point.

"There is a state in the life of a nation where it can no longer survive as a nation," Trudeau added, noting that the same forces had ended the life of empires.

"If a country wants to divide absolutely I am not on the side of those who say we will hold it together by force," he said.

Tory leader Joe Clark, meanwhile, warning Canadians against "complacently ignoring" the threat of separatism, outlined a plan to save confederation that he hopes to put into effect as prime minister.

Speaking to the Canadian Club of Ottawa, Clark said he would begin by reviewing with all provincial premiers those areas in which duplicate, competitive or overlapping federal and provincial programs can be sorted out.

Hopefully, he said, this could be done "to the benefit of those millions of Canadians who pay taxes to both provincial and federal governments and who in the end are the sole supporters of both."

Winter Works Jobs Boosted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government has announced plans to pump $150 million this winter into job-creating projects aimed at high unemployment areas, notably Quebec.

Manpower Minister Bud Cullen told the Commons about 47,000 winter jobs would be created by doubling the funding of Local Initiatives Projects (LIP) to $200 million for the current fiscal year. About 750,000 are unemployed.

Although it is not yet known how many of those jobs Quebec will get, officials said the province would get about 40 per cent of the extra $100 million.

This would move Quebec's total LIP grants from the present $28.9 million to $67.5 million.

Manpower officials said that the new LIP projects would operate on the existing system of providing 30-week projects involving everything from building community skating rinks to running halfway houses.

LIP, the government's largest make-work program, is likely to be replaced next April by a new $358 million program called Canada Works.

The second part of the new plans involves allocating $50 million under the Federal Labor-Incentive Projects (FLIP) for such projects as work in national parks and in small craft harbors.

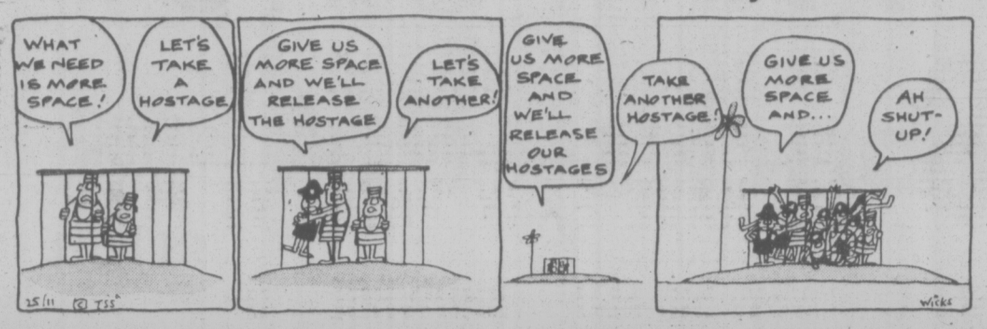

There was no breakdown on how many jobs this would create or how much would go to each province.

Cullen said the projects under the two schemes would only go to areas where unemployment was at least seven per cent. The aim is also to focus on the 17-to-24 year age group.

Cullen said last week that upcoming job creation projects would be aimed mainly at Quebec and the Maritimes where unemployment was the worst in Canada.

He made the announcement Thursday when opposition spokesmen asked what would be done to counter the anticipated layoff of 3,000 workers in transport industries in Quebec, Nova Scotia and Southern Ontario.

Chamber Cheers Dollar Dip

A few Victoria stores, however, were taking three per cent on the American dollar today — although the majority had come to terms with the reality that the Canadian dollar has fallen below par.

If the trend continued, it would provide a boost to the sagging tourist industry over Christmas and in the new year.

Canadian food, labor and equipment costs are higher than in nearby states and the higher U.S. dollar would help to equalize the costs for visitors.

Flos Prior, tourist and convention director for Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said the return to par would bring an end to the arguments created over the exchange rate.

"Some businesses were charging three cents and others were charging a nickel. It created confusion and anger."

Meanwhile, Frame said all Victoria stores should be accepting U.S. funds at par effective immediately.

He said most business are doing this but there are some still charging an exchange rate.

The decline in the Canadian dollar is very good news for British Columbia, especially Victoria, he said.

"This will be a big help to the tourist industry. I hope the Canadian dollar falls further to about 97 cents. That would encourage more Americans to spend their money in Canada and would encourage more Canadians to stay home instead of going south for their holidays."

Al Frame president of the Visitors Information Centre, said a message has gone out to all members of the association to remind them the dollar has fallen.

The Royal Bank of Canada's foreign exchange desk in Victoria said it would cost customers just over $1.05 (exactly $1.013) to buy each U.S. dollar today, including the new exchange rate plus handling charges.

In a related development, the British pound moved up almost a cent against the U.S. dollar in early trading on foreign exchanges today, chiefly on an optimistic forecast about Britain's economy by a leading research organization.

Dealers said the pound rose to about $1.6530 U.S. from $1.6450 overnight. It was trading at $1.6550 in Montreal at noon today.

The British National Institute of Economic and Social Research predicted today that Britain's balance of payments will move out of the red into a $1.6-billion surplus next year and that the pound will strengthen.

FIVE-YEAR REPRIEVE GIVEN SHAKE MILL

The Lime Bay Shake mill on the Songhees industrial reserve will have its lease extended, but only by five years, if the provincial land management department acts on a recommendation Thursday from Victoria city council.

The company's sublease on the waterfront land expires in July next year. It recently applied for a 10-year extension, saying that was the minimum period feasible to amortize the cost of a needed dry kiln operation.

But the city, which has a long-term plan for residential development in that artea, doesn't want to tie itself down with long-term leases.

Ald. Bob Wright told council Thursday the intention isn't to boot industry out of the city, and in fact Lime Bay Shake might be able to obtain further extensions on a five-yearly basis.

"They may be there, five, 10, 20 years down the line. But we wanted them to know that we want to do it five years at a time," he said.

Mayor Mike Young said he had not seen any evidence to indicate that the firm really needed a 10-year lease.

In other business Thursday council:

—Approved in principle the establishment of an archives society, to receive grants and encourage volunteer community assistance for the operation and improvement of the city's archives.

—Approved a land-use contract for property at Blanshard and Hillside (kittycorner from the Blanshard Court housing development) for a mixed commercial-residential development, including 87 apartments.

—Received tenders ranging from $91,485 to $114,793 for the purchase of a new triple-combination pumper for the city fire department.

Pen Opposed

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — The Central Fraser Valley Regional District said Wednesday it opposes plans by the federal government to build a maximum security penitentiary at the boundary of Surrey and Langley. The proposed facility would hold 200 prisoners.

Levesque Pressure Begins

QUEBEC (CP) — The pressures of office were already in evidence Thursday when Rene Levesque was sworn in as the first separatist premier of Quebec.

While the Parti Quebecois leader was swearing allegiance to the queen in a private, 15-minute ceremony before Lt.-Gov. Hugues Lapointe, about 20 demonstrators paraded in front of the national assembly building, making demands on the new government.

The handful of demonstrators, employees of a Pierreville, Que., manufacturer of fire trucks, were demanding that Levesque's government pass legislation barring police from helping strike-breakers through legal picket lines.

Levesque had no contact with the demonstrators.

In his first official function, after being sworn in, he addressed a convention of the Agricultural Producers' Union whose president, Paul Couture, good-naturedly warned the new premier that the farmers will hold him to his word to make agriculture a priority of the Parti Quebecois government.

Moments after taking office, Levesque acknowledged that he was somewhat awed by the task awaiting him.

"The whole thing hit me just as I swore the oath of office," the 54-year-old former journalist told reporters.

True to his reputation as a chainsmoker, Levesque lit up a cigarette as the ceremony began, one witness said.

One-Day Sentence For Gun

A 37-year-old Saanich man was sentenced in county court today to a nominal one day in jail for possession of a semi-automatic pistol for which he did not have a registration certificate.

Judge Peter Millward told Robert George Gibb, 3820 Shelbourne, that having heard the circumstances from defence counsel Derek Brindele and recommendation from Crown counsel Roger Cardinal "I am going to give you every opportunity to rehabilitate yourself."

Brindele said Gibb had returned to his home late at night and found his wife in hysterics as a result of a threat by a man with a gun.

Gibb went to the man's home and found him pointing a gun at the latter's wife. Gibb took the gun from him and said he would return it when the man cooled off.

Cardinal said it appeared Gibb did not intend to use the gun and the Crown did not consider this a serious offence.

GOVERNMENT THAWS CONTROVERSIAL LAND

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen announced Thursday the removal of 381 acres from the agricultural land reserve, including 16 acres that were part of a controversial Chilliwack township application for removal of 1,720 acres.

Nielsen, who is also chairman of the government's environment and land use committee, said in a statement that the cabinet decided to exclude two areas in Chilliwack totalling 16 acres, while the remaining 1,704 acres will stay in the reserve.

Cabinet also approved the release of 365 acres of the 700 the Greater Vancouver Regional District wanted removed, 325 acres in Richmond, and an additional 40 Fraser Valley acres in Surrey.

Nielsen said while the 325 acres will be released, the cabinet decided against a request for an additional 125 acres in the Jacombs Road area of the municipality.

Richmond mayor Gil Blair said in an interview today he is personally pleased the government has seen the merits of excluding the parcel of land from the reserve.

However, he added, three aldermen, two of them elected in last Saturday's municipal election, are opposed to the move and say they will block any effort to have the land rezoned.

One of the opposing aldermen-elect is Harold Steeves, former Richmond NDP member of the provincial legislature.

Blair said rezonings need a vote of two-thirds of council members and the future of any council move to rezone the property will depend on how the other five members of council vote.

The issue likely won't come up for council discussion until the new year, he said.

The Surrey parcel is adjacent to a residential area and its release was supported by the British Columbia Land Commission.

The agricultural land reserve was established by the former New Democratic Party government to preserve farmland.

Chilliwack township council proposed the exclusion of 1,720 acres from the reserve as a long-range plan to consolidate urban growth.

Mayor William Simpson said the plan would contain urban growth within a clearly-defined corridor and link the municipality's development with that of the city of Chilliwack to the north.

S. Africa Stifles Dissenters

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Police are rounding up and restricting the freedom of black and white students, church leaders and union officials in an apparent drive to stifle dissent.

The drive began with raids on schools and homes in Soweto, a giant black ghetto southwest of Johannesburg, after four months of sporadic racial riots and violence in non-white townships subsided in mid-October.

Hundreds of students have been taken into custody and are being held without charge. Many more have fled to escape arrest.

During the last week, the government "banned" 22 white students, union leaders and university lecturers under the Suppression of Communism Act.

Banning orders impose a modified house arrest and restrict visitors and freedom of speech. Authorities would not say why the bans were issued.

On Thursday, black and white plainclothes police raided the offices of the South African Council of Churches and the Christian Institute of South Africa in Johannesburg.

The roundups and bannings have led to protests at home and abroad and driven black youths and some adults to seek refuge from arrest across the borders of neighboring Btoswana and Swaziland.

Reports from the two countries this week said from 1,300 to 1,500 blacks have sought refuges in Botswana and 190 are hiding in Swaziland, doubel the number of a week ago.

Most Rev. Donald Coggan, Archbishop of Canterbury, sent a telegram of protest to South African Prime Minister Jon Vorster over the arrest of a religious editor Thursday.

He asked that Cedric Mayson, director of the Christian Institute, be released or that charges against him be made public.

The vice-chancellor of the University of Cape Town, where three students and two staff members were banned Tuesday, called banning "deplorable."

Sir Richard Luyt said that in the absence of legal protection, people would be overcautious of criticizing the status quo or making proposals for change.

'TURMOIL' IN CHINA

HONG KONG (AP) — Chinese military units were called out to restore order in Fukien province, across from Taiwan, after supporters of Mao Tse-tung's widow and three other discredited radicals created "turmoil," provincial radio broadcasts said.

China analysts in Hong Kong interpreted the broadcasts to mean there were violent clashes in the southeastern province. There was no mention of casualties.

Radio broadcasts said supporters of the ousted leaders started rioting and military units were dispatched to cities, villages, factories, government offices and schools.

BOURASSA PREPARED FOR EUROPE STUDY

MONTREAL (CP) — Former premier Robert Bourassa will spend a year in Brussels studying the Common Market system and its possible application in Canada, according to the Montreal Star.

Quoting unnamed sources in a report from Quebec City today, the newspaper says Bourassa told friends that Canadian federalism will change drastically in the next few years and will inevitably be replaced by a common market arrangement.

Bourassa will pay the cost of the studies himself and not be working on any contract basis. It is expected that he will offer his services to the Quebec government on his return. The paper adds that in a meeting with his successor, Rene Levesque, last week, Bourassa apparently said the Parti Quebecois victory was a sign that Canada's federal system was on its way out and that Quebec would need experts on the ECM.

Bourassa is expected to leave for Europe in January.

Britain Rules Out Force in Rhodesia

Times News Services

LONDON — Britain will assume whatever role or responsibility is necessary to achieve black majority rule and independence in Rhodesia by March, 1978, "or earlier," the British government said today.

It ruled out use of British troops or creation of a new colonial administration to pave the way for independence, however.

Addressing the Welsh centre for International Affairs at Newport, Foreign Minister Ted Rowlands said Britian's three main principles at the Geneva Conference on Rhodesia are:

—The process to majority rule and independence must be irreversible.

—To achieve "if not the cooperation, at least the acquiescence of the white minority which has held and still holds de facto power."

—No independence before majority rule.

Meanwhile in Geneva, black nationalists Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe conferred today on whether to join discussion on an interim government, forcing other Rhodesia peace Conference delegations to wait another day.

"We just have to wait and see," said a spokesman for Nkomo.

The nationalist leaders have been unable to agree on Britian's final offer to break the deadlock over a date for independence under black majority rule. The two met in Nkomo's hotel suite.

In Salisbury, security forces headquarters said today 35 persons have died in Rhodesia's guerrilla war in recent days, including 21 black nationalist insurgents slain by troops since Tuesday.

A communique said government troops killed "a terrorist recruit and a (black) local running with terrorists" as well as two tribesmen who refused to halt when ordered to do so by soldiers investigating "a terrorist presence."

The communique also said a 20-year-old soldier was killed in action.

BRITAIN PLACES A PRICE ON RAPE

The government's criminal injuries compensation board said a woman could expect to receive 1,000 pounds $1,650 if the attack left her with "no significant phycial injuries and average psychological reaction."

Lawyer Michael Ogden, chairman of the board, said many rape victims receive up to twice as much, depending on injuries.

But not all the 1,040 women known to have been raped last year will be compensated — many forego compensation willingly because they just want to forget.

The board has been paying compensation to victims of criminal violence, including those who have been raped, since it was formed in 1964. But today's report was the first that set a specific price for rape victims.

Que. Indians Sue 15 Mercury Firms

MONTREAL (CP) — A group of Cree Indians filed suit Thursday for $8,034,000 in damages against 15 Quebec companies whose operations in northern Quebec have allegedly caused mercury pollution in tribal territory.

The companies named as defendents in the proceedings are: Domtar, Ltd., Domtar Pulp Ltd., Canadian Industries Ltd., Noranda Mines Ltd., Mattagami Lake Mines Ltd., Orchan Mines Ltd., Garon Lake Mines, Ltd., Falconbridge Copper Ltd., Campbell-Chibougamu Mines Ltd., Patino Mines Quebec Ltd., Kerr-Addison Mines Ltd., Newmont Mining Corp. of Canada Ltd., Cunnex Ltd., Rayrock Mines Ltd., and Sullivan Mining Group Ltd.

The submission also states the Crees' property rights are exclusively under feedral jurisdiction and any authorization given the companies by the Quebec government was illegal.

The plaintiffs note mercury contamination and its effects only became known to them late last year or early this year.

MEXICAN PEASANTS REVOLT

MEXICO CITY (WP) — Militant groups of Mexican peasants, encouraged by the government-aided seizure last week of a quarter-million acres of valuable farm lands in Sonora state, are now threatening to take over vast tracts in the neighboring state of Sinaloa.

Independent groups have already invaded 22,000 acres of Sinaloa's fertile Carrizo Valley.

The invasion of the land-seeking peasants has paralyzed the planting of winter vegetables destined largely for export to the United States.

The Hospital Gift

Health Minister Bob McClelland arrived back in Victoria from Japan Friday to find his best laid plans had gone astray. Owners of the McKenzie property favored by the regional hospital advisory committee and rejected by the province as a site for a new hospital have offered an outright gift of $500,000 to the hospital if it located on their property. This would lower the price of the McKenzie property to $1.75 million from the original asking price of $2.5 million.

This new development has breathed life into the regional board where a majority still favors the McKenzie site over the hand-picked provincial choice on Helmcken Road. Next Monday Saanich council members and regional representatives hope to meet with McClelland and persuade him to change his mind.

Since the issue has become a local political football it is relevant here to go into the reasons why the owners of the McKenzie property keep lowering their price. It would appear that developers Fraser McColl and Gordon Rolston sincerely believe, as does the medical community and the hospital advisory committee, the facility should be located there. It is also true that their land is at present in the land freeze and locating a hospital there would be a convenient way out of a lot of red tape. They also own 15 acres of surrounding land that could benefit from the development of the 25-acre hospital site. Considering the location, though, their land would eventually be removed from the land freeze in all probability, providing lucrative commercial and housing development.

But this is not the point in any case. After exhaustive expensive studies the regional board chose the McKenzie site as its number one priority. McClelland refused to accede because of costs. The 34-acre Helmcken site cost $525,000 without servicing, compared to $2.5 million for the McKenzie site. Regional planners argued that sewage costs alone at the Helmcken site could run more than $600,000. Nor did the provincial choice meet the regional plan for a strategically placed and co-ordinated hospital. Highway and Hydro costs were also cited at the Helmcken site.

Last week it looked as though a reluctant regional board would go along with the health minister's choice, if only because of a desperate need for a new hospital after a decade of delay. Originally it looked as though the Helmcken and McKenzie sites would be tit for tat when finally costed out. Seeing an initial saving of more than $1.5 million the province opted for the Helmcken site, although it was not on a final list of choices from the regional hospital planning committee. With another half million lopped off the McKenzie site, the new offer is not only competitive, it is positively attractive.

Since the minister's original decision was based on cost he should accede to the regional board's wishes now. The McKenzie site is the best one. It is the one chosen democratically and favored by those who have studied the question. It is undoubtedly the cheaper one, too. Planning at the Helmcken site has barely started and the only thing the government has to lose in changing its mind is a small option on the Helmcken property. What the provincial government would gain in good will throughout this area would more than pay for the loss.

Strange Delusions

Treasury Board President Robert Andras last week made stout defence of the federal civil service, and it's "integrity, diligence and loyalty."

He said that "the image of the greedy and lazy bureaucrat, wasting his time from nine to five at taxpayers' expense in anticipation of early retirement on a fat pension, is nothing but an outrageous falsehood, propagated by petty ideologues to discredit the public service of Canada."

It seems that Andras' speech was made with one eye to the criticism the government knew would be heading its way when the auditor-general's report came out, because J. J. Macdonell told senior bureaucrats some weeks before his report was published what it contained. The government had plenty of time to devise a counter-strategy.

So we have Andras' diversionary tactic. He set up a straw man and fearlessly knocked him down. His basic premise is faulty. Who has attacked personally the ordinary federal employee? Sure there are grumblings about red tape and bureaucracy but the heavy salvoes are directed at the men and women at the top who, in the minister's words, "determine what must be done."

Andras should speak to the real crisis, not the phoney issue of whether or not "the work ethic is alive and well and thriving" in the federal service. The $4 billion unemployment insurance plan, the $500 million Mirabel white elephant airport, the $750,000 in tax dollars that Transport Minister Otto Lang has spent in flying to and from Grey Cup games, birthday parties and such — these are the issues that made Canadians white hot angry at the federal Liberals — not the civil service.

In the same speech, made in Hull, Que. to the local chapter of the International Personnel Management Association, Andras peppered his remarks with talk of a slower growth rate in the civil service, but like the rest of his speech that too was misleading.

The actual numbers of federal employees may have increased only 1.5 per cent this fiscal year, but the government's own public accounts reveal that departments are simply hiring outside clerical help — which of course doesn't count in the tally of federal employees. That budgetary item increased 34 per cent from 1975 to 1976. Spending for professional and consulting services outside the government's own well-equipped ranks is forecast to rise $162 million to $1.1 billion.

That kind of deception and trickery is what the public wrath is aimed at, not the phoney issue of whether the civil service is full of rotten apples, in Andras' own homely metaphor. He said these perceived vicious attacks upon federal employees are "a perversion and an abuse of democratic principles." Since these attacks seem to be mostly imaginary, in our interpretation, it seems a fair assumption that Andras is projecting the withering criticism directed at the Liberal administration onto the civil service. He is attempting to wrap up the Liberal party and the government and the civil service into one, and labelling criticism of any of the parts as unpatriotic and unconstitutional. It is plain that governing for so long has encouraged weird imaginings among our rulers. It is time they were relieved of their delusions.

Phillips' Big Coal Gamble

When Economic Development Minister Don Phillips returned from his trade mission to Japan I asked him why $300 million of taxpayers' money should be spent on developing northeastern British Columbia coal for the benefit of a few large companies.

At present the province extracts a $1.50 per ton royalty from the resource and there are no signs that this tax will be increased. In fact there is talk of lowering the coal royalty in the northeast part of the province to make the giant deal financially possible.

Phillips answered my original question at length, saying in general that economic growth was good for B.C. It creates jobs. And he concluded by asking a rhetorical question: What good was the CPR and the CNR when they were built?

On reflection the railways had a whole country to sustain them; the proposed northeastern coal development has only a finite resource and the good will of a foreign country to make it viable.

Needs Subsidies

At the same time northeastern coal development is the only major economic initiative developed by the Bennett administration in almost a year in office. As such it deserves close scrutiny by the taxpayers who may eventually have to pay for it.

Basically the scheme is this: B.C. needs a steady customer who will take at least 10 million tons of northeastern metallurgical coal a year to make the project possible. In order to finance such a massive project the provincial government needs federal subsidies.

Phillips' largest problem at present is that he is going to Ottawa with his hand out before he has a firm commitment from the Japanese. Nippon is seriously interested as long as the coal is competitive at international levels and the province can guarantee a long term supply free of labor troubles.

If B.C. can put together an economic package Phillips should have no trouble enticing the Japanese. Other traditional coal suppliers, the U.S. and Australia, don't fit Japanese requirements on two grounds. The U.S. won't sign long term contracts because of its own energy problems and the Australian labor climate is even worse than B.C.'s in Japan's calculations.

Which brings us to the economic imperatives of such a deal. Just south of Chetwynd, Denison mines is the company nearest to actual production. A $1 billion investment would be needed to develop this property, including roads, ports and rail lines. Once this infrastructure was in place other mines would follow, or so goes the logic.

DON PHILLIPS
. . . asking Ottawa for help

If towns, roads and rail lines were subsidized it would save Denison between $300 and $400 million in capital costs, aiding and abetting the economics of the whole scheme. It should be said here that infrastructure cost estimates are purely speculative at present. When Kaiser started its coal operation in the east Kootenays the total cost was thought to be about $90 million. In the end it was more like $170 million.

So Phillips, who has worked hard on the deal, takes his case to Ottawa on Monday. Underlining the importance of the project to B.C., he will be accompanied by the premier and three other cabinet ministers.

The next question is: How will Ottawa react to B.C.'s plea? People within the Bennett administration seem to feel they have a good chance because of the Quebec election. Ottawa will want to appease the west and the grim balance of payments situation makes any foreign sale look good these days.

Opposition members are less enthusiastic, pointing out that Trudeau's government has very little loose change to throw around these days, and if it did, it wouldn't spend it in B.C. where Liberal support is at rock bottom.

No Loose Change

It is also true that Ottawa views natural resource jurisdiction very seriously. A B.C.-Japan coal deal with Ottawa input limited to financing may not be too attractive to the Trudeau administration just prior to an important constitutional conference dealing with provincial powers.

Much will depend on the outcome of these talks, though. Failure for B.C. will leave the government floundering since it has put so many of its economic eggs into this basket. And reading between the lines, emphasis on this project shows that the government expects little expansion in forestry, mining or petroleum industry.

Coal is about the only natural resource that we have left which is still competitive on international markets. What happens in B.C. when that is gone too? Like all its predecessors, this administration has opted for a resource-based economy, with little thought for the alternatives.

Perhaps the government can make a good deal this time. But we have had enough of Columbia River projects and the sell-at-any-price-philosophy of government. British Columbians will want a careful accounting before this grandiose scheme flies away with our tax dollars.

Shabby Service

It is with a certain misgiving that I note that the great shining beacon of reaction in our fair city, namely Peter Bunn, has hoodwinked the electorate and triumphed over the press and media yet again, with the results of the recent school board elections. Somewhat prematurely, I was relishing the thought of the unmeeting of minds that would undoubtedly take place had Mr. Bunn and John Young been elected members of the school board. However this is a serious business and we must give Mr. Bunn full credit for a successful election campaign.

From what I can gather, through the scarcity of news on the subject, our school board will have a most definite reactionary lean in the next year or so. One successful candidate claims instant credit for the financial "clean up" at the symphony office while having never once been to a school board meeting. Another could not even express himself adequately on paper when responding to a Greater Victoria Teachers' Association questionnaire. I hope Mr. Bunn does not strain his arm while continually patting himself on the back.

What will be the likely scenario of school board matters in the immediate future with such an imbalanced board? Firstly, now that Mr. Bunn has the board in his pocket, we can expect an increase in the number of his peculiar scapegoat attacks on the teaching profession. Mr. Bunn has great skill in using the simplistic argument of blaming someone else for problems that are his own direct responsibility. Secondly, without the benefit of balanced opinion on the board, we are bound to be projected into a period of confrontation in educational matters. Extremism at either end of the political spectrum never solved anything. Thirdly, without benefit of a vigorous press, there will be no realistic scrutiny of educational problems and hence no justifiable pressure on elected school board officials to solve them. A reactionary school board is not likely to address itself to modern educational problems (unless casting blame and bandying phrases such as "has not demonstrated fiscal responsibility" can be construed as addressing a problem) unless the press and media fulfill their constitutional responsibilities of giving adequate opinion and information to the electorate.

School board matters are a microcosm of the polarity that has occurred at the provincial political level. We, the electorate, are shabbily served by the press and media who continually condescend to the electorate by serving up the silly simplistic sermons of some candidates who stand for election. We get what we deserve because we do not have a vigorous press.

Lastly, Mr. Bunn, take heed — the electorate has served you a school board on a platter. You will have no one to blame but yourself if you cannot now solve, or begin to solve, the educational problems that beset us all. The electorate does have horse sense and a good long memory. — M. A. Cochran, 1534 Hampshire Road.

Make It N.B.

Surely this should be the matter of an editorial:

"That the part of Quebec lying south of the St. Lawrence river be immediately incorporated into the province of New Brunswick, thus providing a corridor to link western and eastern Canada." — Anon.

Kind Staff

I should like to take this opportunity of expressing my sincere thanks to the staff of the Victoria General Hospital for the care and kindness received during a recent stay in that hospital.

From the ambulance men, the emergency service, the coronary control unit and the general care ward, and the doctors and nurses, the teamwork and care were excellent.

I have nothing but praise for the hospital, and a very warm thank you to one and all.—Mrs. R. M. MacDuff, Victoria.

Whelan, here receiving vegetarian items, says eat less meat.

Adolf Ate Carrots

I write with respect to the publicized statements last week of our agricultural minister referring to people who eat a lot of meat becoming "mean and violent."

While I agree that there are just as good if not better sources of protein available, I wonder if Mr. Whelan is aware of the fact that Adolph Hitler was a vegetarian? — B. Harrison, 345 Michigan Street.

Not Factual

The Canadian Press news item printed in the Nov. 12 issue of the Times under the headline Alcan Won't Obey Pollution Demands requires comment as it is not factual.

The article was the result of a telephone interview by a reporter from the Prince Rupert Daily News concerning the involvement of the pollution control branch in the formation of an environmental surveillance committee at Kitimat.

The facts are as follows:

- Alcan was issued a pollution control permit on Oct. 10, 1975. The permit authorizes emissions from nearly 200 individual stacks and hundreds of potroom roof ventilators. The quality of these emissions is specified on the permit. The quantity of fluoride which can be released is restricted to 10 pounds per ton of aluminum produced. This level must be achieved by Dec. 31, 1977. A reduction to five pounds per ton is to be achieved on or before a date yet to be specified and dependent upon the result of the present program.
- Part of the monitoring program was the determination of fluoride emissions by two methods, viz. by direct measurement of the various emission points including potroom roof emissions, and a monthly fluoride balance (a balance is essentially a comparison between the amount of fluoride which enters the plant and the amount which leaves). Both of these measurements are difficult and require detailed scrutiny before their results can be relied upon. However, Alcan has developed a method of emission monitoring which, although still subject to approval by this branch, appears fairly reliable; Alcan uses this method regularly. The monthly fluoride balance appears to be the least reliable for a number of technical reasons, and may be dropped as a permit requirement. This is the "unreasonable, ill-considered, and impossible demand" to which the article refers.
- The statement that "neither the branch nor the company has suitable equipment to make regular checks on fluoride gas emissions from the Alcan smelter" in incorrect. As explained above, emissions from the smelter are regularly measured. The air in and around Kitimat is also measured using a number of instruments for the determination of not only particulate and gaseous fluoride, but also fluoridation index, sulphation index, dust fall, and suspended particulate. In addition, there are 23 fluoridation plates set up to identify the areas of high concentration within and outside the plant boundaries.
- The issues involving fluoride emissions at Kitimat are complex and experts hired by the company and the union apparently do not agree on the effects of the discharges. To resolve this issue and to improve dialogue and understanding of the problem, a surveillance committee will be formed to examine the information and make recommendations. An invitation to participate on the committee has been extended to the ministry of health, the district of Kitimat, the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers, and Alcan, and their findings will be made public.

As chairman of the surveillance committee, I can assure you that every effort will be made to arrive at a realistic resolution of the Alcan smelter emission problem, and in doing so to keep the public fully informed. — J. B. Brodie, P.Eng., Head, Mining and Smelting Section, Pollution Control Branch, Department of Environment.

Anti-Saanich

As a citizen of the western community I resent the action and attitude taken by Saanich representatives on our Helmcken hospital site at the Nov. 10 meeting of the Capital Regional Board.

The position taken by the Saanich representatives would indicate they are more interested in dollar figures than services to people. Thank goodness for Mr. McClelland's decision on this hospital site.

To have a handful of persons who are not representative of a community hold up a necessary service because of the weight of their votes is certainly most undemocratic.

It might be interesting to the Saanich representatives to know that when they arrive at the municipality boundary there are 40,000 people on the other side who need and require a hospital and these people are more than willing to share this hospital with others. — Lillian James, 114 Burnett Road.

Winter Wind

When I ponder the plight of the Rhodesians I think of names like Michener, Turner, Robertson, Lewis. All of these men were only too pleased and eager to rush in and enjoy the fruits of the Cecil Rhodes legacy.

Would any of them today raise a finger or a voice in defence of that landlocked country that bears the founder's name?

To quote the Bard: Blow, blow thou winter wind, Thou art not so unkind, as man's ingratitude. — Philip Saville, 515 Foul Bay Road.

Class System, Not Welfare state, is the Problem

By HENRY FAIRLIE

(Fairlie is a British journalist who has lived in the United States for several years. He wrote this article for the Washington Post)

Britain is in a pickle. It is not pleasant to see it begging, almost on its knees, for a loan from the International Monetary Fund. It is also not very pleasant to know that some of the reasons why it is in such a pickle are its own fault.

But that is no reason why Britain should be used, as it has been used in America during this year, as an example of what happens to a country when it determines to be socialist. Britain is not socialist at all. It is about as socialist as the boy scouts. The lesson to be learned from Britain is very different.

Let us begin with its situation. From the moment in the spring of 1940 when Hitler began to roll his Panzers across the face of Western Europe, and Britain stood alone against him for more than a year, it chose to sell everything which it possessed, if necessary, to save itself and Europe, America and the rest of the world, from the monstrousness of his designs. Under the leadership of Winston Churchill, it liquidated a huge proportion of the overseas investment which it had created in the 19th century. These investments were Britain's wealth as a trading country; and to help save the world at a crucial time, Britain got rid of them and turned the cash into arms.

Britain has never squealed or whimpered about this sacrifice. It did not squeal when America abruptly ended lend-lease; and it did not squeal when, in giving the first loan to Britain in 1945, America imposed terms of fearful severity on its exhausted ally.

No country that surrendered to Hitler, no country that was defeated, no country that entered the war tardily, then to reap many of its profits, paid such a price for such a benefit to others. Even the physical devastation of Russia was, from the long-term point of view, of a different order.

Before the right wing in America points to Britain as an example it should remember that it was the right wing in America which in 1940 fought every effort to give Britain the aid that it needed, and fought again after the war to deny it the rescue it deserved.

Where you stay what you were born

The wealth of Britain did not lie in its empire as such. In fact, as most historians are now agreed, it made little out of its empire; the cost of maintaining it was large. The empire was primarily important to maintain its overseas investments and its world-wide trade.

It is absurd to compare the situation of a declining trading country, such as Britain, with that of a still-expanding trading country, such as America. It is less the internal economic and social policies of Britain which have caused its present difficulties than the changes in its trading situation as the result of a shift of power in the world which has inevitably affected it more seriously than other European countries, because of the unusual place its empire once occupied.

Even after the war, Britain undertook a responsibility for the survival and welfare of the free world which was already beyond its means and its strength. When Europe was threatened with starvation and the dissolution of its social fabric after 1945, the British people tightened their belts still further to feed Europe's people. Bread had not been rationed during the war; it was rationed after the war so that Britain could send wheat across the Channel.

Of course there have been faults in the public policy of the country. But the fact remains that the persistent difficulties which Britain has encountered since the war have their origins in an external cause, and have been only marginally affected by the introduction of the welfare state, which is presumably what some Americans mean by the country's socialism.

In fact, if Americans want to draw a lesson from Britain, they should consider what many people, British and outsiders, think is the ultimate cause of the country's failure to cope with its economic problems: the survival and rigidity of its class system.

America gives a higher education of some kind to nearly 50 per cent of its young people, which may or may not be a little too ambitious. But what is certain is that it is absurd that, after all the efforts at reform in Britain since the war, only about eight per cent of its young people get a higher education of some sort. For the vast majority of British people there is no way out of the condition into which they were born.

Why should a miner work hard when he knows that not only his own condition, but the condition of his children, will not be altered by his efforts? The mark of American life is that most parents believe that their children will do better than themselves. The mark of British life is that most parents know that their children will remain where they are, and in many cases where even their own parents were. If there is a warning to be drawn from Britain, it is here; and it is a warning that the neo-Conservatives in America might well ponder.

My own observation of American society suggests that there is an elite growing among those with upper incomes. It is not merely a question of earnings and of expense accounts and of taxation, but increasingly one of education. There is an increasing tendency for these people to abandon the public school system and send their children to private schools, where they get well educated and there is some insistence on the elementary academic disciplines of a good education.

And as they have increasingly abandoned the public schools, they have become less concerned with the education that is given to them, since their own children no longer go there. Education in the public schools is increasingly stripped of academic rigor and reduced to a kind of play therapy, to keep the children quiet, even if it does not enable them to be educated. This division of values, between the publicly educated and the privately educated, holds in it the seeds of a class system.

If the process is not checked, it will not be long before there is an elite in America, equipped to govern the society, of perhaps 20 per cent at the most, while the remaining 80 per cent have been reduced to the position of helots, able to read and write, do enough simple sums to enable them just to survive in modern society, do its more menial chores, provide services to the well-off, and watch television in the evenings.

It is the separation between an elite and the helots which has caused most of Britain's troubles since the war. That is the lesson it has to offer; and not the lesson of the dangers of the socialism of the welfare state.

HOW U.S. 'ARMED' VIETNAM

Instant Military Power

By GEORGE C. WILSON
Washington Post

The fall of Saigon last year gave the Communist victors enough American planes, ships, armor and artillery to make Vietnam one of the foremost military powers in Asia, according to the Pentagon's final tally of what was lost.

The North Vietnamese captured nine times as many Cessna A-37 light attack planes as neighboring Thailand has in its air force; gained enough American ships to make Vietnam's navy numerically second (in Asia) only to China's, and obtained more armored cars than India has for its army.

In light arms, according to the Pentagon figures, Vietnam captured 1.6 million rifles, including 791,000 modern M-16s, and a mountain of ammunition weighing 130,000 tons. This works out to more than four pounds for every person in what was North and South Vietnam.

Also, the Communists captured giant American cannons — including 80 175mm self-propelled guns which can shoot 20 miles. They obtained as well 1,000 105mm and 250 155mm howitzers, which American troops used in Vietnam for holding hilltop positions. The captured American equipment was worth about $5 billion.

Vietnamese military leaders are expected to keep a large portion of the American arms, however, to give their infantry more firepower. U.S. military leaders have freely acknowledged that even without such modern weaponry the North Vietnamese infantry demonstrated during the Indo-China war that it was one of the best in the world.

What Vietnam's leaders do with their captured American helicopters — 430 UK-1 Hueys and 36 CH47 Chinooks — will indicate how far the military intends to go to modernize its army. The North Vietnamese did not have helicopters when they defeated the South Vietnamese who did. Former South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu once complained that getting American helicopters was the worst thing that ever happened to his infantry, because his troops became reluctant to walk long patrols.

If Vietnam's new leadership decided against incorporating the captured American helicopters into its army, the country's light infantry will still have much more fire power than during the war. Captured U.S. weaponry ideally suited to a fast moving, light infantry included 50,000 DM-60 machine guns; 47,000 M-79 grenade launchers and 12,000 mortars.

For heavier thrusts, the Vietnamese have gained this American armor: 300 M-41 light and 250 M-48 medium tanks; 1,200 M-113 armored personnel carriers. Vietnam's defenses against tank attack were also boosted by the capture of 63,000 U.S. light antitank weapons.

Also captured were 48,000 U.S. military radios and 42,000 trucks, according to the tally the Pentagon released this month in response to a request made under the Freedom of Information Act.

The Pentagon disclosed that 940 ships and small naval craft were lost but did not give a breakdown. China, in comparison, is credited by the International Institute for strategic Studies with having 1,018 large and small surface combat vessels, 30 minesweepers and 400 support ships. (China is also believed to have 56 old submarines).

In addition to the A-37 aircraft and helicopters captured by the Vietnamese, the Pentagon said the Communists also took 51 F-5A and B model jet fighters; 22 F-5Es; 36 A-1 light bombers; 10 C-130A, 40 C-119 and 40 C-7 transports; 159 O-1 and O-2 observation planes, 36 Modified C47 transports and 22 T-41 trainers.

Other light weapons captured included 90,000 .45 calibre pistols and 875,580 rifles in addition to the M-16s.

U.S. officials have expressed surprise that the Vietnamese have not sold captured arms even though they have received offers for them. Much of the armament has been spotted moving into North Vietnam, perhaps to be integrated with forces near the China border.

The War of the Secret Agents

THE NATION
An Editorial

In the late 1960s, some of the less rational anti-war demonstrators were fond of chanting the slogan, "Bring the war home!" That war has mercifully ended, but recent events make it clear that the war has come home nevertheless — and it was not the young radicals who brought it here. Ironically, but logically, the war now being fought on our shores has been inflicted on us by the same people who sent it abroad. It is a muffled war, an underground war, a war of secret agents.

During the last 15 years, as the struggle for control of the Third World has grown fiercer, the United States has steadily increased its exports of a dangerous political commodity: repression. In country after country, right-wing regimes have taken power with our aid and encouragement, and have attempted the elimination of dissent on a scale hitherto unknown. Their secret police have learned the science of terror from American experts, and our catalogue of goods for sale now prominently features the equipment necessary for counterinsurgency, riot control, political espionage and torture. In short, we have created a dozen Frankenstein monsters — and as such creatures have a way of doing, they have now returned to haunt our own streets.

★ ★ ★

Recent weeks have produced a flood of reports detailing the operations of foreign agents in the United States. The most striking concern the minions of our close ally, the South Korean dictator Park Chung Hee. First we heard of disturbing indications that linked the reactionary religious leader, Sun Myung Moon, to the Korean Central Intelligence Agency. Then came the news of a major inquiry now being conducted into the alleged attempts of the wealthy Korean businessman, Park Tong Sun, to influence members of Congress and other politicians. And The New York Times has published detailed reports on how agents of the KCIA systematically harass Korean communities in the United States. Opponents of Park Chung Hee in Los Angeles have been beaten, boycotted, even kidnapped by Park's ubiquitous thugs.

No less revolting was the bland admission by the Shah of Iran, in an interview broadcast on CBS's 60 Minutes, that agents of the dread Iranian SAVAK operate (with American approval, claims the Shah) to "check up on" his political enemies in the United States. Iranian students here have long suffered from the SAVAK's terrorist activities, and in August Dr. Reza Baraheni, the celebrated poet and scholar whose life has been threatened since he began publicizing conditions in Iran, demanded an investigation of a report (originating within the State Department) that a SAVAK hit squad had arrived in New York with the intent of eliminating Iranian dissidents. On October 28 Secretary Kissinger belatedly agreed to look into the matter.

Assassination of resident foreigners became more than a possibility with the death by bombing of the distinguished refugee from Chile, Orlando Letelier. As we have stated before, there is excellent reason to suppose that agents of DINA — Chile's equivalent of KCIA and SAVAK — were involved in Letelier's murder, and that their purpose was both to silence a powerful democratic voice and to sow fear among those who will carry on Letelier's work.

How many other foreign gangs with sinister acronyms are currently slinking about in this country? And how long before their implements of terror, largely concentrated so far upon their own nationals, will be turned also on Americans?

PARK
. . . terror exported

What we already know makes one point clear: that police repression increasingly respects no boundary. The KCIA, SAVAK, DINA and the rest are indistinguishable from the CIA that trains, equips and nurtures them, and whose "principles" they share.

★ ★ ★

What we are witnessing is the development of an international Central Intelligence Agency, headquartered in Washington. Its foreign affiliates may be under the control of the dictatorships to which they report, but the whole apparatus, including the American CIA, is not effectively checked by the elected government of this country. And that that is so even in the national capital, the murders of Orlando Letelier and his American assistant Ronni Moffitt make painfully clear.

Beating Up Grandmother

russell baker

Another problem we have in New York is children beating up grandmothers. Sometimes they kill them, although the usual thing is just robbery. Sometimes the children are quite young—10, 12, 13 years old. Sometimes the grandmothers are old enough to be great-grandmothers. The other day two pubescent boys did a street-mugging job on a woman who later told policemen she was 103 years old.

This may have been a new record for assault across the ages. You can't be sure. If such records are kept at all, they are bound to be unreliable, since we go for long periods here in New York of not being interested enough in this kind of assault to keep the records very well. Right now, however, everyone is excited about the children brutalizing the old people, and we keep a keen eye for records, the better to savor the excitement of the moment.

Next week, the week after, there will be a new problem. Battered babies, botulism, infectious arson, police disgruntlement, rampant venereal disease. Something. But this week, all attention focuses on beaten grandmothers and insensitive childhood, and everyone is solicitous of the terror in which old people now live. The police, of course, will make special efforts. City Hall expresses concern. Cries of public outrage. Etc.

Next week we will have the same responses for the new problem, but there is no point in being cynical about the ease with which New York transfers its alarm from one insoluble problem to another. In a city this size a problem is very lucky indeed to get a whole week's play in the news: most problems are lucky to get 10 seconds on the local TV roundups.

In any case, one of the things you do here when there is a heavy problem in the news is leap to sociological conclusions about What It All Means. The battered-grandmother movement is particularly ripe for much speculation, since almost any conclusion you leap to is bound to touch on some of New York's most sensitive nerves and guarantee a satisfying argument that will take everybody's mind off the batterings of old people.

My own inclination, for example, would be to explain this kind of crime in terms of family breakdown. Even a child reared by criminal parents will be taught a decent respect for old people, if only out of self-serving motives in his felonious parents, who, anticipating the inevitability of dotage, will want the successor generation of criminals to do the decent thing by their forbears.

It is reasonable to conclude that most criminal parents, upon learning that a child of theirs has beaten and robbed a grandmother, would give him such a forceful lesson in the nastiness of abusing the elderly that he would never do it again. The fact that this crime is gaining popularity among New York children suggests that either they have no families to underline such lessons, or that such families as they may have are no longer doing their jobs.

The suggestion that families ought to be doing such work will irritate certain modern thinkers who contend that the family is obsolete and—worse—a social prison in which the creative impulses of its members are stifled.

Persons who believe there is no such thing as a bad boy may be even more annoyed. I don't want to suggest that strong family discipline will stop these street criminals from proceeding into a life of crime, but only that family can turn their natural criminal inclinations toward activities less odious to society.

This suggestion is based on a recognition of the limits of family power. It assumes a certain number of bad people in the world. If you happen to get one born into your family there is no reason why the family should be blamed. The best the family can do is to channel criminal impulses into something relatively respectable, such as safecracking or political bribery, and pray for the best.

What we now have in New York is a lot of really rotten kids exposing their true nature because family influence has failed to train them to conceal it. The percentage of really rotten people on earth has probably been constant over the millenia; the barbaric periods differ from the civilized, by the breakdown of constraints which, in civilized times, keep the bad people from behaving perfectly natur-"

The most romantic interpretation of the perils of New York's old people is that it is an expression of America's contempt for or hatred of old age, and its idiotic worship of youth. This strikes me as great fun to argue over gin, but pretty silly. Americans may do ridiculous things, like installing new glands and putting 44-inch waistlines into custom-faded jeans, in order to hold onto the memory of youth. The number of us who beat the daylights out of grandmothers en route to the supermarket is, however, infinitesimal.

When you find a couple of lads born in the age of LBJ assaulting a woman born in the administration of Ulysses S. Grant, it is just as sensible to argue that today's youth is reacting in rage against the corruption of the Grant gang as to contend that it is expressing a national contempt for old folks. What we have are some very bad children who lack the family background required to channel their felonious instincts into more socially acceptable activities.

PREMIER OPTIMISTIC

CRANBROOK (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday that he is more optimistic about British Columbia's economy than ever before.

He told a Chamber of Commerce luncheon in this southeastern B.C. community that the province had its best monthly performance in two years in October.

Unemployment of 7.1 per cent, seasonally adjusted to 7.3 per cent, is the lowest since the Social Credit government took office last December, the premier said.

Bennett said there were 81,000 unemployed in October compared with 88,000 in September and the labor force rose to 1,065,000 in October compared with 1,057,000 in September.

Mineral claim staking is three times as high as it was a year ago, he said, while oil and gas exploration is at levels last reached in the mid-1960s.

Bennett said the government will cover some gaps in the anti-inflation program this spring.

"Our inflation rate is not as high . . . but controls have not worked as successfully as I'd hoped," he said, "We're not as productive or competitive as our major trading partners."

Scrap Pipe At Kitimat, Indians Urge

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The proposed Kitimat-Edmonton oil pipeline should be scrapped or delayed because of environmental concerns, the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia said Thursday.

More than 200 delegates to the brotherhoods annual convention also voted to demand scientific studies on the environmental effects of oil transportation.

They said there is no definitive knowledge of tidal currents, location of shoals and weather conditions in Hecate Strait which would be plied by supertankers bringing Alaska oil to Kitimat.

The brotherhood also opposed the pipeline because no guidelines exist for impact of the pipeline on the marine environment and damage from oil spills would endanger the native people's livelihood in fishing.

The proposed oil tanker route from Valdez, Alaska, to Kitimat will endanger coastal land claimed by the Haida, Tsimpsheans, Nishga and Haisla people, the brotherhood claimed.

The brotherhood also voiced dissatisfaction with the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs in a resolution claiming money allocated to the nion.

In a two-hour closed meeting on Thursday, delegates voted unanimously to ask for coastal tribe support in demanding that federal funding currently given to UBCIC be handed over to the brotherhood.

Gilbert Cook, Brotherhood vice-president, said in an interview that the organization is unhappy with UBCIC representation of Coastal Indians in the aboriginal rights and land claims settlements.

Luggage Closure Lays Off 90

VANCOUVER (CP) — Skyway Luggage Co., scene of a bitter 4½-month strike earlier this year, is closing its Vancouver operation, throwing 90 people out of work.

The decision was made after the company was given an eviction notice by Judge G. B. Ladner in county court last Friday.

The notice was sought by the owners of Skyway's premises, Storey Bros. Holding Ltd., when Skyway refused to pay a higher rent. It is to take effect Dec. 10.

Union employees at the plant were given two days' notice of the shutdown on Monday and 70 of them worked their last day Wednesday.

Another 20 workers are being kept on temporarily for cleanup duties.

The Skyway employees are members of the Teamsters Union after their former organization, the Upholsterer's International Union merged with the Teamsters.

Teamsters' business agent Penny Coronuk said many of the workers are long-term employees and there is no provision for serverance pay in their contract.

She said there is not much the union can do about the closure.

"We can't stop them from shutting down if the court orders it," said Coronuk. "Also, we're not sure what they're up to. Every day, it's something different."

She added: "Some of the people are glad it's closed."

But he denied the company is going out of business.

Another Teamster business agent, Peter Moslinger, said the union is receiving phone calls blaming the high wages at the plant for the shutdown.

"The people there are just making barely above the minimum wage. The company was haggling about the rent and was given an evication notice. That's the reason they're closing down," he said.

Bennett Doesn't Want Diversion

CRANBROOK (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett expressed his concern Thursday about British Columbia's Hydro's proposal to divert the Kootenay River into the Columbia River.

Speaking to a youth conference here, Bennett said he is personally against the project and intends to fight it because it would result in major flooding from Golden to Windermere.

Bennett said he might reconsider his objection if B.C. Hydro could come up with proposals that would remove concerns about the project by environmentalists.

"The arbitrary way Hydro appears to operate" is one of his main concerns with the project, he said.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said the project is still at the drawing board stage and B.C. Hydro hasn't decided whether or not to proceed with it.

The Kootenay diversion project involves construction of a canal between the Columbia and the Kootenay River providing more water to the reservoir behind the Mica Dam.

Bennett said he recognizes Hydro's primary purpose is to provide energy, but his own obligation is to look at every aspect of projects such as the proposed diversion.

Asked if this means there will be no diversion. Bennett said, "We'll just have to see how strong the government is compared to B.C. Hydro."

PWA, Charlotte Subsidy Sought

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Carey Linde, regional director for the Queen Charlotte Islands, has called on federal Transport Minister Otto Lang to subsidize Pacific Western Airlines' freight service to the islands.

In a telegram Thursday, Linde said delays in delivery of backlogged machinery parts are "causing substantial economic loss in machine downtime."

Although Linde said PWA will expand its service to seven flights a week in mid-January from the current five, "this action will reduce surplus backlog by less than one-half total tonnage only."

Drivers End Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 200 truck drivers and warehousemen belonging to the Teamsters Union ratified a two-year agreement with Chapman Transport in British Columbia on Wednesday, ending a nine-week strike. A union spokesman said the agreement calls for a 19-per-cent pay increase in the first year and a six-per-cent increase in the second.

Candidates Blocked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Pezel and Walter Pezel, owners of the Empress Hotel in East Vancouver, are to stand trial Dec. 7 charged under the Landlord and Tenant Act with failing to allow a political candidate access to hotel guests. Bruce Yorke, defeated mayoral candidate for the Committee of Progressive Electors, charged that he and two COPE aldermanic candidates were refused permission to distribute election material at the hotel.

Fraud Charged

RICHMOND (CP) — Mactainair Systems Ltd. and Mildred D. McFadden, one of the firm's directors, were committed for trial on charges of fraud and false pretences. They are accused of using a forged Air Canada purchase order to make a false financial statement and obtain $74,000 in credit from the British Columbia Development Corp.

The Luminar I's totally unitized gun allows for wider focusing lenses. Consequently, it produces colour beams that are fuller than any conventional system's. It uses a full-black matrix, all-slotted shadow mask for clearer colour and improved contrast, assuring true-to-life colour picture rendition. An integral semitoroidal deflection yoke dispenses with the need for dynamic convergence, greatly enhancing picture stability while reducing power consumption. The Hitachi LUMINAR I provides better overall colour on the screen than conventional systems.

Shot Charging Grizzly, B.C. Woman Fined

VANCOUVER (CP)— Hunting big game without a licence has cost a Fort St. James woman $75 even though the big game was an angry grizzly about to charge.

Joyce Helweg, 27, was on a hunting trip about 120 miles north of Fort St. John, Sept. 5 when she was surprised by the grizzly while taking an evening stroll.

"When we turned to head for the road this grizzly was running dead at us," Mrs. Helweg said Tuesday in a telephone interview from her home.

"Then it stopped suddenly and I raised my rifle, carefully took aim and discovered the safety was on. Jeff (Robinson, her brother-in-law) took the safety off.

"The bear had sat down and was shaking his head furiously back and forth. I was told later grizzlies do this just before they charge."

"I got off a shot and hit him in the neck, but he was still kicking. Then the panic set in," remembers Mrs. Helweg. "We shot and shot and shot him until he was full of holes."

Hoping to keep the skin as a momento, Mrs. Helweg purchased a tag for the animal and sent it to be reported to the authorities.

As a result, she was charged with hunting big game without a licence. She elected to pay the $75 fine rather than travel 300 miles to Fort St. John to fight the case.

Tito Offers Pardons

BELGRADE (Reuter) — President Tito pardoned 163 convicted people Wednesday to mark next Monday's national day. Three more were absolved from further criminal proceedings and 532 Yugoslavs had sentences reduced, an announcement said.

STUDENTS DROP POOR FOODS

VERNON (CP) — The operators of school vending machines are making a major shift to more nutritious products, says a vending company owner here.

Ken Bridgeman of Mid-valley Vending said in an interview only three of the 10 schools his company supplies still have soft drink machines — the rest offer milk and juices.

"Chocolate milk is our biggest seller," he says.

"During the last three years we have been expanding to better food as fast as we can," he says, "but it is a matter of moving only as fast as we can afford while also giving time for students' tastes to switch.

Gov't Has No Plans for Land

VANCOUVER (CP) — The public works department said Thursday that Ottawa has made no specific proposal for use of government-leased waterfront land intended for the Pacific Environment Centre which was scrapped under federal restraints.

J. B. Seaborn, a deputy environment minister, said in Ottawa the government was trying to get out of its $241,000-a-year lease of the land, set to run until 2043.

A public works spokesman here said meetings have been held with the Squamish Indian Band, on whose reserve the land is situated, but there have been no detailed negotiations.

EX-CULTISTS SLAIN

NEW DELHI (UPI) — The founder of a fanatical religious cult that has spread to several other countries was convicted today of murdering six defectors who tried to expose him.

Prabhat Ranjan Sarkar, founder of the Anand Marg ("The Way to Bliss"), and four of his top lieutenants were convicted of murder, conspiracy and abetting murder. They face a maximum sentence of death by hanging.

A former railway employee known to followers as Ananda Murti, or "Bliss Personified," Sarkar, 65, founded the cult 30 years ago to bring about "Rule by the elite" and rid India of corruption and bad administration.

Prosecutors said he masterminded the killings in a Bihar forest of six dissidents who were exposing "the misdeeds and crimes" of the cult, and his four aides committed the murders.

The investigation of the crimes lasted four years and the trial went on for a year. Two Antnd Marg fanatics killed themselves four years ago in New Delhi and Pantna to protest the charges against Sarkar.

Top Floor Won't Be Used For Extra Court Facilities

Top floor of the new Law Courts addition at 850 Burdett will go either to the provincial housing ministry or the court services branch.

It will not be used to provide extra court facilities.

When construction started on the project the Victoria Bar Association called for the 15,000-square-foot top floor to be used for extra high-court facilities.

The space will be first offered to the housing ministry on a "first-refusal" basis and if the offer is rejected, court services will take it over.

The area would become headquarters for court services and would involve a relocation of the current court services staff now based in Vancouver.

The decision on use of the top floor was made at a meeting this week involving representatives of the attorney-general and the public works ministry.

Stop the Music—Council

Victoria city council passed a resolution Thursday asking the Liquor Administration Branch to restrict the operation of the James Bay Inn to "one that is compatible with a residential environment."

The effect of the request would be to seek cancellation of the live music now offered at the Inn's Foghorn Cabaret, the main attraction for a clientele which residents of the area have accused of late-night drunkenness, rowdyism and vandalism.

Although the owners of the establishment at 270 Government were allowed a hearing Thursday to state their side of the case, the majority of council members appeared convinced that theirs is not the inn of the sixth — or any other — happiness for residents who live in the immediate area.

Mayor Mike Young told the owners' lawyer Harry Johnson that he had presented a "masterpiece of obfuscation."

"I don't know whether you have persuaded me that there is any advantage in turning a neighborhood eyesore into a neighborhood nuisance," the mayor added.

Johnson had told council that owners John Perry and Bill Wellburn bought the 70-year-old building in 1973 and spent $275,000 turning it from a dilapidated, rat-infested eyesore into a "physically attractive building, inside and out."

He claimed most of the charges levelled against the establishment's clientele were "unfounded," and that this was substantiated in a recent report to council by the deputy police chief.

Most such incidents had no connection at all with the James Bay Inn and "would have occurred in any event," he said.

Young told Johnson he had failed to deal with the crux of the complaints — namely, that the establishment had been converted to a use which is incompatible with a residential area.

Ald. Bob Wright said he was satisfied after talking to some of the residents concerned that there were reasonable grounds for their complaints.

In answer to a question from Ald. John Hayes, Johnson said the owners would not consider it "feasible" to close down the band operation.

He caused some laughter from the public benches with his statement that "there is not entertainment, there is a band."

Johnson said although the operation calls itself a cabaret, it is not actually a cabaret according to the definition of the liquor licensing regulation.

Train Hits Woman

LILLOOET (CP) — Bertha Adolph, 50, of Lillooet, was in poor condition in Vancouver General Hospital after she was run over by a B.C. Rail freight engine. RCMP said the woman was taken to hospital where her leg was amputated above the left ankle. Train engineers said they saw the woman lying on the tracks but were unable to stop the train before it hit her.

Oil Industry Hindered By Taxman, Expert Says

VANCOUVER (CP) — Revenue Canada's careful scrutiny of oil industry tax returns may be hindering investment at a time when the government hopes for more exploration, says a Calgary tax specialist.

R. A. Brown, a tax expert with Thorne, Riddel and Co., told the Canadian Tax Foundation annual conference here that tough new rule interpretations by Revenue Canada threaten to offset new tax write-offs for investors proposed in Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's May budget.

The budget proposals, now awaiting parliamentary approval, would allow investors a 100-per-cent tax write-off for money invested in oil and gas exploration. Currently, the write-off is limited to 30 per cent.

"Unfortunately, what the minister of finance doles out on the one hand, the anti-avoidance division of Revenue Canada appears to want to take away on the other," Brown said.

"For the past several years, the oil and gas industry has been under constant scrutiny of the tax avoidance division," he added. "Their officials now refer to Calgary as the 'tax avoidance capital of Canada.'"

Revenue Canada pressure has been particularly heavy on limited partnerships, companies which small investors set up to protect themselves from unpredictable risks, he said.

Tax officials are borrowing an American interpretation of what constitutes direct investment in exploration, Brown said, with the result that many costs cannot be written off.

The Revenue Canada interpretation limits the costs applicable to a write-off to the investor's actual capital contribution.

Funds borrowed to finance the project may not be written off, nor may the costs of arranging financing or guarantees.

The interpretation is unfair, Brown argued, because it limits write-offs to capital directly risked in the venture. Other property, used as security for a loan, is not considered directly risked and can not be written off.

Andras Planning New Spending Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will soon announce new spending controls as part of a public relations plan to convince taxpayers it is not playing fast and loose with their money.

Treasury Board President Robert Andras is expected to announce new austerity measures early in December in the wake of Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell's report, tabled Monday, which charged that the government is losing control of the public purse.

Officials say the government will also declare victory in achieving restraints announced a year ago, citing numerous examples of spending that has been reduced, deferred or abolished.

Despite the planned publicity campaign, the Macdonell report and recently-completed public accounts have revealed big increases in wide areas of public spending and questionable controls over many spending programs.

These include a 34-per-cent increase over the last year, to $14.1 million, in spending for temporary employees whose presence on the public payroll is not revealed in civil service staff lists.

Cabinet ordered the publicity campaign last June and timed it for this fall after studies of the anti-inflation program showed that many Canadians doubted the government was doing its share to control spending.

In a confidential memo to all deputy ministers, Treasury Board secretary Gordon Osbaldeston said "fewer Canadians now believe that governments have either subjected themselves to anti-inflation controls or are fully committed to the success of the program."

The Osbaldeston letter instructed departments to prepare lists of programs that have been abandoned, delayed or curtailed since last Dec. 18 when Jean Chretien, Andras's predecessor, announced cuts of $1.5 billion in 1976 spending.

However, the austerity claims could be potentially misleading because they will include projects, program expansions or new programs which were merely considered by departments but never submitted to treasury board for approval.

Fears Turning Towards Jobs

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Consumers in Canada are becoming more pessimistic about unemployment and more optimistic about inflation, according to the most recent survey issued Thursday, conducted for the Conference Board of Canada, in September.

The net effect of these considerations on consumer spending is that the consumer will be reluctant to make major changes in his financial position to accommodate a significant increase in current spending.

"In this environment of cautious optimism we can expect continuing moderate growth in total spending on consumer goods in the months ahead with households waiting for clear signs of improved economic conditions before committing themselves to major purchases," said the board.

An improvement in overall consumer optimism is recorded by the board in the results of the survey.

While the index of consumer attitudes showed an improvement from the levels recorded in the previous three quarters, it still remains low by historical standards.

This downward trend in inflationary expectations started in the fall of 1975 and has been reinforced by the substantially improved price performance recorded in the first eight months of 1976.

The board suggests that by implication consumers appear convinced the Anti-Inflation Board is having some success in gaining some control over price trends.

Continuing to deteriorate however are consumers' expectations regarding overall economic conditions in general and labor market conditions in particular.

"The proportion of respondents in the September survey expecting more jobs to be available six months from now was close to the all time low recorded for this question," said the board.

"This pessimistic outlook reflects continuing high and rising unemployment rates and the falling job vacancy rates which have accompanied the slow pace of economic recovery in the past few months."

AIB Goals Beaten

KELOWNA (CP) — June Menzies, vice-chairman of the federal Anti-Inflation Board, said Thursday that the first year of the anti-inflation program has reduced the inflation that has been sweeping Canada.

Anti-Inflation Board objectives included getting the consumer price index out of the double-digit annual increase and reducing it over a three-year period to eight, then six, then four per cent. 100 businessmen at a Kelowna Chamber of Commerce meeting. The objectives for the year had not only been achieved but surpassed, she added.

RESTRAINT 'IGNORED'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dave Chapman, British Columbia's member on the federal Anti-Inflation Board, said Thursday that increased prices in several government services are indicative that the federal government is largely ignoring its own restraint program.

Chapman said the government has given no support to the board and has increased prices in such areas as postal rates, rental of federal land and buildings, passports and airport parking.

Government, management and labor must talk seriously about a post-controls period and the government must provide the forum for such discussions, which it has not done to date, he added.

The board is going to have to make recommendations on the ending of controls, Chapman said, but no direction has been given to the board.

He said the average Canadian did much better monetarily in the nine months since the board was created than in the nine months before con-

Loan Firm Bank Switch Blasted by Saltsman

OTTAWA (CP) — The timing of a bill to convert one of the nation's top finance companies, IAC Ltd., into a new chartered bank was termed an "affront to Parliament" by New Democratic finance critic Max Saltsman Thursday.

Mr. Saltsman (Cambridge-Waterloo) said in the Commons that it was wrong to push through a bill giving IAC the privileges of a chartered bank before Parliament's review of the Bank Act, expected soon.

He said during second reading debate of a bill introduced by John Reid (L—Kenora-Rainy River) that IAC should not feel that when it wants something it can get it from Parliament without debate.

The bill would allow IAC to set up a whooly-owned subsidiary, Continental Bank of Canada, which would absorb IAC within 10 years.

IAC shareholders would simply become Continental shareholders within 10 years.

The bill appeared in the Senate a year ago but failed to get final approval in the Commons before the last Parliamentary session ended. So Mr. Reid was bringing it before the House for another try.

Saltsman said he can understand that IAC shareholders "want to play in the major leagues" — the banking business.

"It would be immensely profitable for shareholders.

House TV Bid Dying

OTTAWA (CP) — Chances of immediately televising commons proceedings just about died Thursday when Prime Minister Trueau failed to get unanimous approval of all parties for the idea.

While New Democratic Leader Ed Broadbent supported the plan, Progressive Conservative House Leader Walter Baker said he wants a full debate before agreeing to it.

The prime minister said he would not bother with the project if he could not get quick approval for it.

Trudeau said that if the opposition was ready to support the idea now, he would authorize televising the Commons proceedings.

Air Canada Fare Hikes Attacked

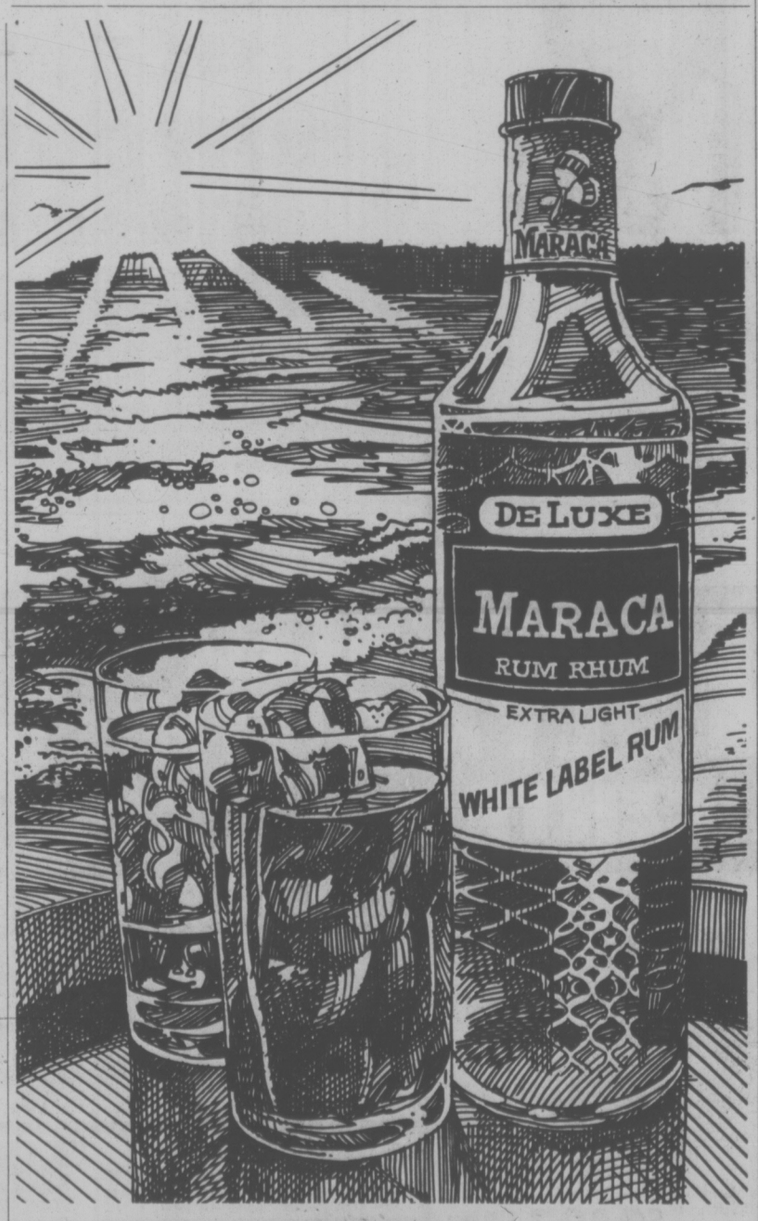

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission was accused Thursday of rubber-stamping Air Canada fare increases without taking into account documents alleging airline mismanagement.

Dan McKenzie (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) told the Commons transport committee he could not understand why the commission approves the fare increases "in light of the financial mismanagement within Air Canada."

"We aren't responsible for running Air Canada," replied commission president Edgar Benson.

Benson said the commission looks at over-all airline costs to see whether fare increases are justified.

Air Canada increases had been similar to those of CP Air on mainline domestic routes.

Ethnic Groups Cheer Immigration Changes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Proposed immigration act changes are not major some in fact are helpful, Spokesmen for city ethnic group said Thursday.

The new act could require immigrants to stay in small communities for up to six months in exchange for easier admission to Canada.

Kartar Bains, general secretary of the Khalsa Diwan Society representing Sikhs, said East Indians feared the new law would set quotas for various countries but "I don't think it has been based on that."

He considered a universal quota good for Canada because it will protect jobs and said he was pleased with a new provision allowing parents or grandparents of any age to be sponsored by their offspring.

Currently, only parents or grandparents oyer 60 years of age could get the top-priority sponsorship status.

However, Harry Con, national chairman of the Chinese Freemasons of Canada, said the measure should have been brought in long ago.

The idea that parents over 60 were somehow different than younger ones was ridiculous, he said.

"A father is a father."

He was also disappointed that brothers and sisters were not added to the spnsor category. The idea that such a change would allow many more people into the country is nonsense.

He also saw a need for change in the immigration points system because it discriminates against Third World people who can't compete with the point-making skills of Europeans.

"I feel wealthy immigrants are not necessarily the good immigrants, he said. "Those willing to toil and sweat for this country, these are the good immigrants."

Albert Vanderheide, past president of the Ethnic Press Association and publisher of two Dutch newspapers, said the six-month requirement in a small community is a good idea though "I would up it as far as five years."

But he was against a quota system.

"I happen to believe that Canada needs people. The birth rate is falling and we're going to end up with a lot of older people if we don't watch out."

Angelo Pappas, president of the Hellenic Community of Vancouver, said the quota system is good.

"At the present time it is a realistic idea not to get more people than the country can absorb."

He said the six-month requirement has merit although a drawback is the control on Canada's traditional concept of freedom of movement.

Free Calls End

HAVANA (Reuter) — Free calls from public telephones, an early fixture of Premier Fidel Castro's Cuba, come to an end today, the Communications Ministry announced. Local three-minute phone calls now will cost five cents.

Ironing Out The Press

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford said Thurday that he postponed introduction of new human rights legislation in the Commons "because reporters were too busy covering other stories."

Basford made the comment outside the Commons where parliamentary press gallery reporters gathered around MPs commenting on the controversial resignation of a member of the government's newly-appointed royal commission into government financial supervision.

The minister said he decided to postpone introducing his bill and to cancel a scheduled news conference after aides told him that reporters were tied up with other stories.

Top Canadian Priority Economy —Not Quebec, Bennett Says

Times News Services

The No. 1 priority in Canada now is not the threat of (Quebec) separatism but the economy, Premier Bennett said Thursday.

Speaking of Prime Minister Trudeau's appeal Wednesday night, he said it was fine for the prime minister to talk about unity but it would be a shame if the real problems of Canada are overlooked at this time.

Other political leaders and businessmen reacted with ambivalence to Trudeau's national television address.

Most observers agreed that Trudeau's remarks indicated a softening of his attitudes, but some found contradiction and obscurity in his remarks.

Claude Ryan, publisher of the French-language Montreal newspaper Le Devoir, said the speech "left us in the dark" about the federal government's intentions.

He did, however, detect "a marked improvement in Trudeau's attitude.

"He issued no challenge, no threats, no paternalistic warnings," Ryan said.

Stephen Lewis, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, described the address as "a fine and moving speech," but expressed fears that it came too late.

"I hold, unhappily, in my own mind, in my own heart, the recognition that the flexibility and the warmth the prime minister holds now was absent for too many years," he said.

Saskatchewan Premier Alan Blakeney said the speech contained a more conciliatory approach to federal-provincial relations and it appeared the prime minister was mellowing.

The premier noted that Trudeau said he was willing to open discussions with the provinces over a redefining of the constitutional sharing of powers in Canada. Such a comment might mean less emphasis on bringing the constitution to Canada before current power divisions are assessed, he said.

Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia shared Mr. Trudeau's view that the country should remain calm.

Judge Is Most Un-Judge-Like

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

He doesn't look like a judge, dress like one, act like one, or talk like one either.

In fact he's the most un-judge-like judge you've ever likely to meet.

But a judge is precisely what Justin "Chuck" Ravitz is, one of 20 magistrates presiding over the criminal court — the Recorders Court — in Detroit.

In Victoria Thursday for a University of Victoria speaking engagement sponsored by the Alma Mater Society, Ravitz, 36, is, quite frankly, an aberration of the most conservative of all professions.

Besides being a judge, he's a Marxist-Leninist, not a Communist in the popular sense of the word . . . more a philosophic purist.

When he was elected to a 10-year term as a judge in 1972 the shock waves were felt from one end of the U.S. to the other.

Here was a judge who was different.

Here was a judge who refused to stand for the pledge of allegiance, an unheard of affront to tradition.

Here was a judge who refused to wear court robes until ordered to do so by the Michigan State Supreme Court. Here was a judge who did away with protocol and formality and turned his court into a "people's court."

The New York Times called him the nation's first radical judge.

The day after Ravitz was elected, the president of the Detroit Bar Association called a press conference to suggest that perhaps judges in Michigan should be appointed and not elected in future.

Life hasn't been always easy for this Nebraska-born, Michigan-trained lawyer. But he's survived in the land of free enterprise.

He says he's surprised even his staunchest critics.

"They've discovered I don't have horns after all, that I can do the job, that I'm not on the take."

An articulate champion of peoples' rights, he's a perennial favorite on college speaking tours in the United States and Canada. Although this is his first trip to Victoria, he's addressed groups of students in both Toronto and Montreal before.

In an interview Thursday, Ravitz, looking and talking like a Jack Kerouac character, mused on the ills of the U.S. judicial system — the "unjustice system," he says.

"I call it America's only working railroad."

He means that despite the high-sounding rights and privileges contained in the U.S. Constitution with the entitlement to a fair trial and presumption of innocence, persons facing criminal charges are being railroaded into pleas of guilty.

"About 90 per cent of all convictions aren't by way of trial but rather through the plea bargaining process," he says. "Indeed the system demands it. The only way it could survive is if a huge number of people enter guilty pleas."

Ravitz believes there is insufficient attention being given to causes of crime.

How can anyone voice a "legitimate concern" about crime, he says, as long as 25 million people in the U.S. live in poverty, as long as five to seven million people are unemployed, as long as children are allowed to witness thousands of vicious assaults on television, as long as society continues to emphaize "unnecessary" material acquisition over basic people needs.

He views the problems as a class struggle aimed against "the dictatorship of the ruling class."

Revolution is inevitable, he says, and while he'd prefer it peaceful, he's prepared to fight if necessary.

Like all Marxists, he's prepared to wait.

"I'm extremely optimistic," he says. "Perhaps not in the short run . . . but in the long run, that's another thing."

Princess Pat Officers Found Safe on Trail

Three officers of the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, were found safe and sound on the West Coast Trail Thursday after a two-day search.

Capt. Donald Pippolio, Capt. Douglas Martin and Capt. Barry MacDonald set out on a hunting and fishing trip earlier this week.

On Tuesday their boat's motor quit north of Port Renfrew and huge waves swamped the craft as they drifted into shore.

U.S. coast guard cutter and helicopter began searching.

On Wednesday the three men refloated the boat but the motor failed again.

They built a big fire on the beach that night, had supper and bedded down. Pippolio kept up his Mayday messages.

On Wednesday night the men's trailer and truck was found parked at Port Renfrew.

On Thursday, after leaving a message on the boat's hull that they would try to walk to Port Renfrew, the three men set out.

Pippolio reports the three miles took six hours. "Heavy rains had turned all the creeks into torrents," he said.

The Americans had seen the fire but bad weather had prevented them reaching the spot. At one time a small boat from Port Renfrew had attempted to get there but had to turn back because of high seas.

The camp site, boat and its message were found by a Canadian coast guard helicopter Thursday morning and a Labrador helicopter from CFB Comox flew a PPCLI search party in around noon.

Pippolio and his companions were met by three of the searchers 200 yards from the south end of the trail.

Saanich 4-H Club Awards Trophies

Achievement trophies were awarded at the annual banquet of the Saanich 4-H Goat and Fodder Club held recently at the Saanichton Experimental Farm Hall.

Leslie Paxton and Philip Russell tied for the Kiwanis Junior achievement cup. They won the most points in showmanship, judging, record-keeping, barn inspection competitions, public speaking demonstrations, educational displays and evaluation of goats.

Nancy Williams received the intermediate cup and the senior trophy went to Wendy Salisbury, club president. Richard Knowlson was awarded the fodder achievement trophy.

Second-year leadership pins were also presented to Mr. and Mrs. Mark Knowlson and Norman Salisbury, and a five-year leadership certificate to Grace Salisbury.

Freighter Refloated

NANAIMO — The freighter Prisida, aground on a sandbar in Nanaimo harbor, was successfully refloated by four tugboats Thursday.

The vessel apparently took the wrong side of a marker in the harbor, designed to steer shipping away from the sandbar.

There were no injuries among the crew and there was little damage to the ship.

Weather Ship Returns To Station

The weather ship Vancouver leaves Esquimalt on Saturday morning for Station Papa after having had emergency repairs carried out in the Esquimalt Graving Dock.

She was on Station Papa, 800 miles out in the Pacific, on Sunday when part of her bow thruster equipment cracked and collapsed, filling a forward compartment with water.

Ministry of transport district manager Larry Slaght said the water was contained by a watertight door but the decision to bring her back was made because of the risk in stormy weather.

The ship entered drydock Thursday morning.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A recent shoplifting spree by two women who stole more than $350 worth of merchandise from Woolco department store was triggered by a television program dealing with shoplifting techniques, according to one of the women's defence lawyers.

But the show never told anything about store detectives, Darrell Woods, counsel for Patricia Reid, 27, of 710 Connaught, told Victoria provincial court Thursday.

Mrs. Reid and Sharon Lee Nason, 23, of the same address, were given suspended sentences and ordered to do 40 hours of community service work each.

Woods said Mrs. Reid had seen a television show which gave detailed information on shoplifting techniques.

She wanted to give it a try herself, he said, and once she had started, she got carried away.

"It was like a key to a candy store," Woods said, adding that most of the items were of no use to the accused.

The women stole a variety of items, including jewelry, watches and clothing. They put the items into a Woolco shopping bag and stapled it shut with an old Woolco receipt.

On Oct. 29, Mark Steven Johnston, 24, of 603 Frances, got upset because he thought a car driver had cut him off while he was riding his motorcycle on Carey Road.

He pulled up beside the car, knocked on the window. When the driver, a 70-year-old man, didn't respond, Johnston tried to open the door of the car and drag the driver out.

While this was going on, both the car and the motorcycle were travelling at about 30 miles an hour.

A short time later, Johnston succeeded in stopping the car and what followed resulted in a charge of mischief by damaging somebody's property to which he pleaded not guilty.

But he pleaded guilty to charges of dangerous driving and common assault and was fined a total of $600.

Lumberman Attacks Pearse Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Bentley, president of Canadian Forest Products Ltd., said Thursday that implementing the Pearse Royal Commission recommendations affecting company rights to Crown timber could seriously hurt forest industry investment.

Dr. Pete rPearse, a University of British Columbia economics professor, released his report last week following 1½ years inquiring into the province's forest resources.

Bentley said his chief concern is with the security of lease tenure and recommendations in the Pearse report which, if adopted, would threated industry stability, damage the competiviteness of British Columbia exporters in world markets and jeopardize jobs.

Dr. Pearse proposed a change in tenures that would allow the Crown to reduce the size of holdings at intervals of five or 10 years.

Bentley said that the adoption of these proposals would severely erode security of tenure on lands held under tree farm licences, or under other permits covering cutting in public sustained, yield units.

He said the adoption of Dr. Pearse's recommendations would make it difficult for companies to raise outside capital for needed investment.

"Who will be able to afford major capital investment when his raw material base is exposed to a 20-per-cent reduction every 10 years?"

Guilty Plea To Bank Theft

A 21-year-old Esquimalt man pleaded guilty in Victoria county court Thursday to robbing the Royal Bank, 1108 Government, of $120 on Oct. 27.

Michael Filipchuk will be sentenced by Judge E. J. C. Stewart Dec. 14 after a presentence report is prepared. Until then, he will remain at large on his own undertaking.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said Filipchuk had no weapon but told a teller he had a gun. He was arrested a short time later with almost all the money on him.

Defence counsel Edward Pollard told the judge he will ask for a suspended sentence and probation.

Accused Wrestles Sheriff

A 22-year-old Victoria man, upset that he must remain in custody pending trial, berated the prosecutor and wrestled with a deputy sheriff in Victoria county court Thursday.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart dismissed an appeal by Bill McElmoyle, counsel for Samuel Taylor Karaim, against a detention order keeping Karaim in jail pending trial on a breaking, entering and theft charge.

The judge left the courtroom, and Karaim went to prosecutor Peter Birkett, seated at the counsel table, demanding to know: "What have you got against me?"

Deputy sheriff Hans Fredericksen went to Birkett's assistance, and Karaim turned on him and a scuffle ensued.

Fredericksen continued to try to restrain Karaim and the man's mother joined in, berating the deputy sheriff in a loud voice.

The noise from Courtroom 3 at the temporary courts in the former St. Ann's Academy became so loud that an indecent assault trial in Courtroom 2 where the complainant was testifying, had to be adjourned.

The adjournment enabled other deputy sheriffs to assist Fredericksen. Karaim was handcuffed and taken away by three deputies.

The prosecutor's office indicated there will be no charges.

Guilty Plea Follows Break-In

Glenn Alan Batchelor, 17, of 3116 Woodpark, pleaded guilty in country court Thursday to breaking and entering a house at 847 Pears June 29 and stealing 13 bottles of liquor, a .22-calibre rifle and a .38-calibre revolver.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart will sentence him Jan. 13 after receiving a pre-sentence report.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said the break-in occurred in the late evening of June 29 at 847 Pears Road in Metchosin.

Batchelor was found passed out in the 4200-block Metchosin road about 3 a.m. June 30 and was taken to hospital for alcohol poisoning.

Everything was recovered except three bottles of liquor, Birkett said.

This winter get a clean grip on the weather with the new Shell double steel-belted winter radial from $49.95.
Our Polar radial has a deep, wide tread pattern that throws out snow and slush. This self-cleaning action will enable you to drive with confidence.
Dependability Double steel belts give maximum puncture protection and reduce tread "squirm" for better mileage and traction. The tough construction of our new Polar tire has been road-tested for millions of miles.
Better mileage The Polar Steel Radial can deliver better gasoline mileage than conventional snow tires because there's less rolling resistance. Long-wearing tread compound gives dependable traction.
What "snowballing" means
RIGHT: The deep wide zig zag grooves of the Polar Steel Radial throw out snow and slush. You get a good clean grip every time the tire rotates.

Don't mix conventional and radial tires If snow tires on the rear axle are of different construction from those on the front wheels there is a risk of slipping and causing a skid. In fact, an "over steer" characteristic can develop with the rear wheels not having proper cornering traction on wet or slippery roads.
30-day free trial We're confident that the new Polar Steel Radial is one of the best you can buy. If you're not completely satisfied your Shell dealer will refund your money at any time up to 30 days after purchase. Drive in today for a safe, clean grip on winter!

Estuary Preservation Need Stressed

British Columbia needs a coastal management act to protect shorelines and river estuaries, biologist Jim Pojar told resource experts at the annual meeting Thursday of the Provincial Ecological Reserves Committee.

Pojar, also a member of ERC, made his views known after some scientists expressed concern at the steady deterioration of river estuaries — mostly due to logging.

Pojar also proposed that the Chemainus River delta and estuary be set aside as an ecological reserve. It would involve about 618 acres of mud flats and grasslands, not duplicated anywhere else in B.C.

He pointed out the Chemainus has not been as badly disturbed as other river estuaries on the Island, and is an important nesting and resting place for waterfowl, he said.

Pojar said the log-booming had been going on in the estuary but that the leases had expired and the debris had been cleaned up.

Dr. Derek Ellis, University of Victoria marine biologist, said a survey made of estuaries on Vancouver Island this year revealed that "very few of the larger estuaries on Vancouver Island remain untouched by development of one form or another."

Almost all surveyed estuaries showed evidence of active or abandoned logging operations, he said.

"There are now so few untouched watersheds and estuaries left on Vancouver Island, that their rarity alone should be sifficient justification for commitment to the social need of research," he said.

Preserves Urged On Bird Islands

Three-quarters of British Columbia's 550,000 breading sea birds nest on 10 islands or groups of islands, a Provincial Ecological Reserves Committee meeting was told Thursday.

"You would think with all those islands off the coast sea bird colonies would be more widely dispersed," said Wayne Campbell, Provincial Museum ornithologist. "But this is not so and for this reason it is important to protect their nesting sites."

Campbell proposed that Pine Island, Storm Island and the Buckle Island group in Queen Charlotte Strait, be set aside as an ecological reserve.

Loggers Battled For Virgin Forest

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — A battle between loggers and residents over about 70 acres of 400-year-old virgin timber covering the scenic north slope of Dog Mountain about 15 miles west of here was fought to a standstill in the regional district of Alberni-Clayoquot regular meeting Wednesday.

The board defeated a motion by Sproat Lake director Tony Dixon, calling on Forestry Minister Tom Waterland to declare a logging moratorium on the north slope so the matter can be studied.

The matter was tabled until the next meeting Dec. 15.

MacMillan Bloedel, which has permission to start logging 213 acres of the land in January, says the timber is needed to ensure winter employment for loggers and full utilization of equipment.

HOUSING PROPOSAL 'OVERBLOWN'

Bawlf Would Drop Threat

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said today he would be willing to see his housing report implemented without its controversial threat to cut off funds to municipalities who fail to meet their quotas.

"There were 40 recommendations in the report. If only 30 of them are approved, that is a pretty good batting average," he said.

"If all of the report is implemented except for that single recommendation, I would be pleased."

Bawlf was commenting on a statement Thursday by Capital Regional District board chairman Jim Campbell, who said he could favor the report if the threat of cutting grants could be removed.

Bawlf today said that, while the recommendation is not the key element in the report, he still favors the idea.

"But the recommendation has been misunderstood and the controversy over it has been overblown."

The Bawlf report says that the provincial government should set housing quotas for a regional district, including apartments as well as single family homes. Then the regional district should distribute this quota among the local municipalities.

Any municipality that refused to meet its quota would have its provincial grants cut off.

"Are they going to cut off our water? This is childish talk," Campbell said.

Bawlf today explained the recommendation refers only to "growth grants," not regular cost-sharing programs between the province and the municipality.

"We are talking about only the growth grants, not all grants to municipalities. There are funds available for growth and if a municipality adopts a no-growth policy they should not receive these grants."

Specifically, he said, he was referring to a new municipal incentive grant program that provides funds for housing.

"I expect there will be additional grant programs announced soon on housing and these also would be covered by the recommendation."

Bawlf said all these incentive grants together form the grants referred to in his recommendation. But, while he personally favors the idea of a cutoff of these grants in the event a municipality refused to meet its housing quota, the program might be successful without this threat.

Bawlf said he achieved a major objective in getting the community talking about housing.

"Criticism of the report was essential. I invited and welcomed it."

He said Housing Minister Hugh Curtis has indicated the report will form the basis for legislation but there was no indication what form this legislation will take or how soon it might be introduced.

Bawlf said he is hopeful it will be soon but there should be full public debate on the recommendations before the government takes action.

Puffers Butt Out Bid To Ban VGH Smoking

The hospital board Thursday night rejected a proposed policy statement which wagged a finger at smoking and other unhealthy excesses.

Directors then went on to turn down a proposal there be no smoking at board meetings. The vote appeared to be 4-3 but it was hard to count through the smoke.

The smokers on board were understandably not keen on the proposed policy statement — and the non-smokers didn't think it was tough enough.

"It's a motherhood statement . . . a nothing statement," said director Carol Pickup, a non-smoker.

The draft policy statement pointed out hospitals are supposed to restore health and prevent disease so the board, doctors, staff and patients should "encourage exemplary health practices through promoting realistic attitudes toward health hazards such as obesity, tobacco and alcohol."

Pickup said the hospital should take specific steps, like stopping the sale of tobacco on the premises.

Michael O'Brien, director of personnel relations and a smoker, said the hospital has four separate contracts with groups of employees who would have a legal right to launch grievances if a no-smoking policy was imposed on them.

Director Michael Ashwood-Smith, a non-smoker, said he is going to try and draft a policy statement which will satisfy both sides.

Service Cuts Started By Firemen in Saanich

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Saanich firemen, annoyed at the status of negotiations with the municipality for a 1976 contract, today began a cutback in services.

The 93 members of the International Association of Firefighters, Local 967, have agreed to maintain emergency fire and ambulance services but will no longer carry out fire inspections or safety checks.

Local president Ken Ebbs-Canavan said today the cutback will continue until the firemen get a satisfactory reaction from the municipality.

He said the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, bargaining for Saanich, has offered the firemen 7 per cent increase in wages and one per cent in fringe benefits in a one-year contract retroactive to Jan. 1.

This is not satisfactory, he said, because it would leave Saanich firefighters further behind their Vancouver counterparts than they have been in the past two collective agreements.

Ebbs-Canavan said for the past two years Saanich has been only $33 a month behind Vancouver and the firemen feel there is no reason to change this.

He said Vancouver firemen are seeking parity with Vancouver police who have settled for a 10.2 per cent increase but that agreement is now before the federal Anti-Inflation Baord.

Ebbs-Canavan said the Vancouver percentage will likely be ruled back to about 9 per cent and Saanich would then want something slightly less than that.

In the meantime, he added, Saanich firemen have asked for an interim increase of the 8 per cent already approved by the municipality.

Ebbs-Canavan said he met this morning with Saanich Mayor Ed Lum and the mayor said the firemen's proposal to remain only $33 a month below Vancouver firefighters is a fair one.

The mayor, he said, also agreed that the firemen should be given an interim increase.

Lum stressed at the meeting that he could not officially make the firemen an offer because the bargaining is being handled by the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

However, Lum said, he will approach Carl Anshelm, chief negotiator for the association, and make the municipality's position known.

Until the GVLRA makes a new offer, the cutback in services will continue, Ebbs-Canavan said.

He stressed Saanich residents will continue to get emergency service.

"We feel the residents of Saanich deserve top-line emergency service and we are prepared to provide that," he said.

However, firemen will no longer conduct school inspections or check out public buildings at night. Nor will they conduct tours of the firehall or clean and wash the firetrucks.

Ebbs-Canavan said it is time Mayor Lum and the rest of council "get off the fence and get down to meeting their obligations."

He said the association and Anshelm have no feeling for the municipality or the firemen.

THEY MADE the poles too long or the fence too short around the University Centre construction site on Gordon Head campus and Greg Kent demonstrates breaching security is no problem. A university spokesman said fence is really just intended to mark construction boundaries and it was contractor who chose expensive chain link complete with useless barbwire. (Bill Halkett photo)

TOWN TALK

Sixteen-month-old Jeremy Rilshede this week suffered through one of his first lessons in the intricacies of adult conveniences, and nearly gave his mother a fit.

Jeremy decided he wanted to ride the lazy susan in the corner of the kitchen at 2178 Alder. Half-way through, he got stuck in the cupboard door.

Mom pushed and pulled, but Jeremy wasn't to be budged. His head was twisted back, and he began to choke. Mom called the fire department.

Deciding not to wait any longer, she gave one mighty push and Jeremy popped inside the lazy susan.

He was finally free of the door, but now he was trapped inside. He was stiff with fright and his parents had another struggle extricating him.

But they finally succeeded, and the rescue squad was called off. The parents have decided to install locks on the cupboard doors.

What goes bong, bong when it should go bong? And bong, bong, bong when it should be only bong, bong? And bong, bong, bong . . . but you get the picture.

What's giving Victorians more bong for the buck these days is the carillon in the tower at Belleville and Government beside the Provincial Museum. It's still stuck on daylight saving time apparently, and won't be telling the right time again until April. So, a simple rule of thumb — subtract one bong and you have the right time, except when it bongs only once. Then add 11 bongs, because it's really 12 o'clock.

What innocent words does Santa hear as he cradles little children on his knee these days? What childish requests do the sweet little creatures whisper in the ear of Father Christmas?

Town Talk asked Karin Hewlett, one of Santa 's helpers out at the Hillside Mall, the most unusual gift request she had overheard. She said it was the seven-year-old girl who asked Santa for a Master Charge card!

The Capital Region Board held an hour-long secret meeting Wednesday — and of course all the details (about hospital sites) were splashed over the newspapers the next day.

One of the 17 politicians in that meeting told Town Talk later that three-quarters of the hour was spent debating whether to keep what happened in the other 15 minutes from the press.

Back in 1857 a tiny barquentine carrying 12 guns became the Royal Navy's first full-time hydrographic survey vessel on the Pacific coast.

For many years the deputy director-general of marine sciences, Bill English, has tried to persuade the federal government to name a modern hydrographic ship for that historic barque, to no avail.

So English, an enthusiastic power boater, christened his 26-foot cruiser Plumper and entered the name in the Registry of Shipping at Ottawa.

If the department of environment wants to preserve the name in one of its own vessels now it will have to be as Plumper II.

Dockyard Security Checked

Security at CFB Esquimalt has received a thorough investigation by base commander, Capt. Colin Shaw, after an incident in Halifax where a Russian seaman stumbled into the dockyard and wandered around unnoticed for one hour.

The seaman was not challenged until he fell into the harbor.

"Capt. Shaw is satisfied that, taking into consideration the economic restraint in manpower, that we have the best possible dockyard security," an armed forces spokesman said today.

He said the Naden part of the base does not present a security problem.

Thieves Take Wrong Drugs

Two bandits are in for an unpleasant surprise if they indulge in a collection of drugs stolen during a robbery Thursday of the James Bay United Pharmacy, 230 Menzies.

A Victoria police spokesman said most of the drugs stolen, if taken to excess, will cause severe constipation.

Police said the men, one wearing a stocking mask and a yellow and brown touque, the other with a blue woollen scarf wrapped around the lower half of his face, burst into the pharmacy at about 5:45 p.m.

One of the men waved a sawed-off shutgun and forced pharmacist Gerry Lundgren and three employees to lie on the floor. His accomplice demanded morphine and money.

But the men got neither.

Instead, the polce spokesman said, the pair seemed to become nervous and grabbed two bottles of cough medicine and some pills from a shelf.

The take included 2,000 tablets of ¼-grain codeine, 1,000 tablets of ½-grain codeine and 50 tablets and a four-ounce bottle of Lomotil, a synthetic narcotic used to treat severe cases of diarrhea.

The men ran out of the pharmacy and were last seen racing across a small park at the corner of Menzies and Michigan.

Alternative Plans

If a hospital is not built on the vacant slope at Douglas and McKenzie, some sort of commercial-residential project will be, one of the property owners said today.

Gordon Rolston, director of R. and M. Development Co. Ltd., said his company has to do something with the 40 acres it owns at the northeast corner.

But he and partner Fraser McColl are acutely aware the site is a strategic one at the gateway to the city. Planning for it will be done with Saanich planners and whateyer goes there will be attractive, he said.

This week the development company lowered to $1.75 million its price for a 25-acre parcel at the corner if an acute care hospital is built there.

$40,000 in Bequests From City Businessman

The Times has learned that bequests totalling more than $40,000 to several Victoria church and community organizations are included in the will of Robert H. B. Ker, the prominent city businessman and philanthropist who died Oct. 20 at the age of 81.

The complicated will, with a number of codicils, is expected to be probated within a few weeks.

Among public bodies and agencies, the biggest beneficiary is the Anglican Synod of the Diocese of B.C., which receives $20,000.

Ker expressed the wish — but did not specifically instruct — that the money be used to provide assistance to retired clergy and their widows or orphans.

Accompanying a $5,000 legacy to St. John's Church is a similar "earnest hope" that the money be used for the maintenance and repair of church buildings, including the rectory and parish hall.

Other organizations named in the will include:

—The mayor and council of the city of Victoria, $1,000 suggested to be used for improving amenities at the senior citizens' activity centre in Centennial Square.

—The YM-YWCA of Victoria, $2,000.

—The governing council of the Salvation Army, Canada West, $5,000 for general charitable purposes in the city.

Teachers' Pay Rollback 'Premature'

Greater Victoria school trustees acted "unreasonably swiftly" when they decided Thursday to immediately implement the first rollback of teacher salaries.

Teachers' association president Walt Kitley said today the move was premature in light of the B.C. Teacher's Federation current court case challenging the legality of the Anti-Inflation Board's retroactive ruling.

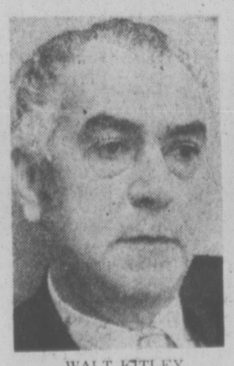

He also said the AIB has not even agreed to the payback scheme drawn up by the school district.

Trustees called an emergency board meeting Thursday without the usual 48-hours notice.

As a result of the hastly-called meeting, teachers got November paycheques today reduced by almost two per cent.

(The AIB ordered a salary rollback from 11.3 per cent to 9.5 per cent earlier this fall.)

And on the December cheque, the first of the paybacks will be deducted from the district's 1,400 teachers. Teachers retroactive paybacks range from $200 or $300 to $2,000 returning to the district about $350,000.

WALT KITLEY

Trustees voted 6 to 0 (trustees Lavinia Greenwood, Mark Fisher and Hal Knight were unable to attend) to immediately begin paying the AIB reduced pay scale and to collect the retroactive payback between December and May, 1977.

Kitley said it would have been wiser for the trustees not to have acted so hastily. If the court case rules in favor of the teachers, District 61 might be "in the embarrassing position of having to pay back to us what we paid back to them."

But at the meeting, trustees felt they were in a legal position to act immediately. Chairman Bill Ross said trustees felt AIB authorization to begin implementing its own ruling was not needed.

The district's solicitor and the B.C. School Trustees Association also supported the move. The steps District 61 took were outlined in a letter the district received recently from the BCSTA.

Game More Important Than Awards

By JOHN SHORT

TORONTO (CP) — Quarterback Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan Roughriders and tight end Tony Gabriel of Ottawa Rough Riders were awarded the top individual awards in the Canadian Football League on Thursday night but both said Sunday's Grey Cup game is more important.

Lancaster, named outstanding player for the second time, said the individual awards are one highlight of the annual Grey Cup pageant but that they don't touch the big game itself.

Gabriel said he doesn't like to let individual awards get in the way of an event like Sunday— "win or lose, I'll be there."

Lancaster won over Jimmy Edwards, flashy Hamilton Tiger-Cats running back, and Gabriel was selected over defensive end Bill Baker of British Columbia Lions, who won over Granville Liggins of Toronto Argonauts as outstanding defensive lineman.

Dan Yochum, Montreal Alouettes tackle, was named top offensive lineman over centre Al Wilson of British Columbia Lions and John Sciarra, B.C.'s wide receiver and backup quarterback, was named top rookie over Canadian fullback Neil Lumsden of Toronto.

Lancaster received a $3,000 Canada Savings Bond and Edwards $1,000. Sciarra received $1,500 and Gabriel, Baker and Yochum $2,000 each. Baker also got one of three $500 runner-up awards.

After the presentations, Gabriel said he felt that, win or lose, Baker was the better man, and that he liked his wife's suggestion Wednesday that the two split their winnings. Gabriel was honored as top Canadian in 1974 and Baker was runner-up behind defensive end Jim Corrigal of Toronto last season.

Baker, 32, who helped spark Saskatchewan to its only national championship in 1966, returned the compliment and said selectors for the awards —donated by Canadian Schenley Distilleries Ltd.—made a wise choice in naming Gabriel top Canadian.

Lancaster, 38, who was chosen outstanding player in 1970 and led the CFL in passing this season, succeeded Calgary Stampeders' running back Willie Burden, the 1975 winner. Gabriel succeeded team-mate Jim Foley as top Canadian and Sciarra followed Ottawa quarterback Tom Clements as leading rookie. Outstanding offensive lineman last season was Charlie Turner of Edmonton.

One of 10 children of a Pennsylvania steelworker, Lancaster this season completed 297 of 497 passes for 25 touchdowns and 3,896 yards. His completion average was .601.

He often calls the 1976 season his most satisfying because he played without injury and had plenty of opportunity to pass. The Roughriders, who finished first with 11 wins and five losses before defeating Edmonton Eskimos in the western final, struggled without a solid running game early in the season.

Edwards, 25, attended Northeast Louisiana University and played two seasons in the World Football League. He joined Hamilton as coach Bob Shaw traded running back Andy Hopkins to Montreal for five players.

Gabriel, all-Canadian three times and an Eastern Conference all-star every season since 1972, played four seasons with Hamilton before joining the Rough Riders last season following a lengthy salary dispute with Hamilton. He was selected the most valuable player in 1970 at Syracuse University, where he graduated in chemical engineering.

Injured Roughies Problem

TORONTO (CP) — Head coach John Payne of Saskatchewan Roughriders said Thursday that fans probably would welcome a two-week delay between playoffs in the Eastern and Western conferences and the Grey Cup final.

"It would give both teams in the final a better chance to have all their players healthy," said Payne, who leads the Western champions agains Ottawa Rough Riders in Sunday's national final.

"I realize it would be difficult to extend the season by another week at that stage, but I'm sure it would enable each conference champion to put its strongest team on the field and that's what the fans want."

Payne said Saskatchewan is still concerned over the condition of three players, slotback Tom Campana, cornerback Paul Williams and linebacker Bill Manchuk. Campana and Williams are recovering from ankle injuries and are likely to play while Manchuk suffered a bruised knee and definitely will be in the lineup.

Payne said the 22-man rosters of the CFL cause difficulties for everybody. "We're not as healthy as we'd like to be, but in some seasons, every team is severely weakened by injuries."

The Roughsideers have found the artificial turf at Exhibition Stadium hard and shortened their scheduled 90-minute workout Thursday by about 30 minutes. Players had complained of sore hips, backs, ankles and knees because of the pounding.

Early this season, Saskatchewan's injuries included a broken leg suffered by running back Keith Barnette. It was a severe blow because the Roughriders were attempting to rebuild their running game following the retirement of George Reed.

Saskatchewan came up with Molly McGee from Ottawa and he provided an outside threat to take some of the psessure off fullback Steve Molnar. Molnar also was injured and missed two games, probably causing him to miss the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season.

Offensive lineman Mike Dirks, who was thought to have suffered a broien hand in Saskatchewan's 23-13 WFC final win over Edmonton, said Thursday the injury is not serious.

"I think it will be all right," Dirks said. "It's badly swollen and a little sore but it won't stop me doing what I have to do."

Dirks isn't concerned with the playing conditions, either.

"When I went to school at Wyoming, I remember practicing in a blizzard.

"It was so cold, we didn't sit down. We huddled together to keep warm.

"The guys on the outside gradually moved into the middle. We kept circling like that and hoped nobody would have to get out of the uuddle and go anywhere."

Bruin Rally Keeps Home Streak Alive

By The Canadian Press

New York Islanders are a team on the rise in the National Hockey League and Detroit Red Wings are a once-proud club in the doldrums, but Michel Bergeron was more than an equalizer Thursday night.

Bergeron scored his fourth game-winning goal of the season and his second in as many nights as the Red Wings recorded a 3-1 upset at Uniondale, N.Y., and left Islanders coach Al Arbour fuming.

"It was Thanksgiving Day and we played like turkeys — physically and mentally," Arbour lamented.

In another game, Boston Bruins defeated Vancouver Canucks 4-2 to stretch a home-ice unbeaten streak to 31 regular-season games.

In World Hockey Association action, Quebec Nordiques downed Indianapolis Racers 5-0 and New England Whalers got past Birmingham Bulls 5-3.

Walt McKechnie and Buster Harvey also scored for Detroit, who led 3-0 before Andre St. Laurent of the Islanders beat boalie Ed Giacomin at 10:28 of the second period.

"There'll be some changes in personnel — I'm going to ship some guys out," Arbour said of his Islanders, still six points ahead of second-place Atlanta Flames in the Patrick Division with two games in hand.

It was New York's second consecutive loss after 10 games without a defeat.

Rookie Stan Jonathan scored the winner for the Bruins at Boston after veteran Jean Ratelle burst between Vancouver defencemen Harold Snepsts and Mike Robitaille and slipped a one-handed backhand pass to Jonathan. He put the puck into an open net behind Canucks goaltender Curt Ridley early in the final period to break a 2-2 tie.

Brad Park, Wayne Cashman and Dave Forbes had the other goals for the Bruins, who have 26 victories and five ties since their last home-ice loss. Bobby Lalonde and Don Lever scored for Vancouver Canucks, who have managed just a tie in their last nine games.

Serge Bernier scored two goals and added an assist to help the Nordkques to vigtory at Indianapolis. Serge Aubry turned away 27 shots for Quebec's first shutout of the year and Marc Tardif, Christian Bordeleau and Paulin Bordeleau fired single goals.

The Nordiques opened a four-point lead over second-place Cincinnati Stingers in the East Division and are six points ahead of thrd-place Indianapolis.

Russian Big Names Coming on WHA Tour

TORONTO (CP) — The Soviet national hockey team that will tour eight World Hockey Association cities will be comprised of a who's who of Russian players, unlike the format of their Canada Cup '76 squad.

The 28-man roster put together by head-coach Boris Kulagin includes several outstanding performers who were passed over for the Cup tourney earlier this season but who undoubtedly would have enhanced the Soviet's third-place finish behind Canada and Czechoslovakia.

Big shooters like Boris Mikhailova, Viktor Shalimov and Aleksandr Yakushev and defenceman Yuri Liapkin have been returned to favor under Kulagin for the coast-to-coast North American tour that starts in Hartford, Conn., Dec. 27 against New England Whalers and concludes Jan. 8 with Quebec Nordiques in Quebec City.

"We had been promised the strongest Soviet team ever to appear in North America, and, according to the roster which we have received today, that is exactly what our fans will be seeing," Ben Hatskin, chairman of the board of the WHA, said Thursday.

The Soviet goaltending will be handled by veterans Vladislav Tretiak and Aleksandr Sidelnikov.

Joining Liapkin on defence will be Sergei Babinov, Aleksandr Biliajetdinov, Aleksandr Gusev, Victor Khatulev, Vladimir Krikunov, Vladimir Lutchenko, Vasiliy Pervkhin, Gennadi Tsygankov and Valeri Vassilyev.

Boris Aleksandrov, Vyacheslav Anisin, Helmut Balderis, Aleksandr Golikov, Sergei Kapustin, Valeri Kharlamov, Aleksandr Maltsev, Vladimir Petrov, Petr Prirodin, Vladimir Repniov, Vladimir Shardrin, Vladimir Vikulov and Vietor Zhlutkov complete the forward alignments.

Kharlamov also missed the September series.

Following the game at Hartford, the Soviet squad has games lined up against WHA opposition at Cincinnati, Dec. 28; Houston, Dec. 30; Indianapolis, Jan. 1; San Diego, Jan. 3. Edmonton, Jan. 5; Winnipeg, Jan. 6, Quebec City.

By The Canadian Press

Two breakaway goals by New Westminster Bruins in the first period aided a 6-3 victory over Portland Winter Hawks in one of two Western Canada Hockey League games Thursday night.

In the other game played in Winnipeg, the Monarchs scored seven goals in the first two periods before playing through a scoreless third period to defeat Flin Flon Bombers 7-5.

A crowd of 5,193 fans in Portland, Ore., watched the Hawks fall behind 3-1 after the first period and 4-3 after two.

Stan Smyl opened the scoring for Bruins, followed closely by the two breakaway goals by Doug Derkson and Randy Betty. Bruce Andress, Ray Creasey and Miles Zaharko scored one each.

RUTGERS COMPLETES BEST-EVER SEASON

By The Associated Press

Rutgers concluded the best season in its 108-year United States college football history with a 17-9 victory over Colgate on Thursday night, improving the longest major college winning streak to 18 games.

In other games, Sun Bowl-bound Texas A and M whipped Texas 27-3 and kept its hopes alive for a Southwest Conference co-championship and East Carolina routed Appalachian State 35-7.

The victory for Rutgers was perhaps the most significant, because the contest amounted to a bowl game for the Scarlet Knights. They wound up the year unbeaten with an 11-0 record, but were not invited to a post-season bowl game because of a supposedly-inferior schedule.

MacKay A's Hero

Victoria Athletics are still undefeated in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League, but they almost waited too long before getting by James Bay 54-53, at Lambrick Park School Thursday night.

Jim MacKay scored with only one second left to play to give the A's their eighth straight victory. MacKay paced all scorers with 24 points..

Brian Sutherland-Brown gave James Bay the lead at 53-52 with only 13 seconds to play and it appeared the A's were doomed before MacKay connected just before the final whistle.

Sutherland-Brown had 16 points, high for James Bay.

COACH SWINGS STICK —SPECTATORS HURT

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Three spectators, including a woman, were injured Thursday night when New England coach Harry Neale swung a hockey stick at an unruly crowd behind the Whaler's bench. The incident occurred 25 seconds from the end of New England's World Hockey Association victory over Birmingham. With the Whalers leading 4-3, they added an empty-net goal on a rink-long shot by Mike Rogers which touched off a celebration on the New England bench.

Officials said Neale was hit by debris from the stands and retaliated by swinging a stick at the crowd behind the bench. Three persons required medical attention. Security personnel and police broke up the melee.

Neale was questioned by police and visited the injured woman before he was escorted from the building an hour after the game ended.

No charges were filed.

"I'm very sorry the incident happened and apologize to anyone who got hit," Neale said. "but I didn't know who might come over the glass. The fans behind our bench were throwing objects.

"We didn't come down here to celebrate Thanksgiving or have a fight. We came to play a hockey game. I can understand Birmingham fans not liking the fifth goal. We were pretty unpopular when that puck went into the net."

The crowd of 10,226 was angered when the referee waved off what would have been the tying Birmingham goal late in the third period. He said Gavin Kirk was in the crease.

Birmingham coach, Gilles Leger, said: "There's not another building in the league where they'd call a puck back for anything short of murder. That's why you have fights on the ice and fights in the stands. The officials lost control of the game."

Rest for Newcombe

NISHINOMIYA, Japan (AP) — Australian John Newcombe, 32-year-old three-time Wimbledon champion, is withdrawing from tennis competition for three or four months because of a bad arm.

Next at 144 were Americans Hollis Stacy and Amy Alcott. At 145 were Japan's Chako Higuchi and Jane Blalock of the U.S.

Fergy 14 Behind Record-Breaker

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Thursday was a good day for British Columbia professionals Bill Wakeham and Muncy Booth but it didn't quite match the one enjoyed by 23-year-old Lon Neilson of Belle Plain, Iowa.

Neilson fired a 10-under-par 61 at Pina Country Club, breaking the course record by two strokes, to capture a five-stroke lead heading into the fourth and final round of a National Golfers of America tournament.

Wakeham, firing a three-under par 69 at nearby Camel Back Inn Country Club, picked up six strokes on the leader to challenge for individual honors in another tournament — the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association annual pro-am classic.

The Cowichan pro, who trailed Frank Fowler of Fairmont Hot Springs by eight strokes after two rounds of the CPGA test, was only two behind heading into today's final rounds at Camel Back and McCormack Ranch.

Wakeham was at 211, Fowler at 209.

Playing with Wakeham in the pro-am are Ron Hunt of Vancouver, Bill Bond of Victoria and Gerry Upton of Chemainus. They have a 503 total in the complicated point system scoring, while the runner-up team, captained by Ray Milne of Edmonton, has 490.

Mike Rivers' Nanaimo team is fifth with 474 points. Other Island team totals are: Tedd Genese (450), Bill Goldsworthy (446), Sid Dahl (448) and Laurie Carroll (428). None of the Island pros are in contention for individual honors with the exception of Wakeham and Dahl, who is at 218.

Booth, of Vancouver, had his finest competitive round as a pro — a five-under 66 — but emerged with only a share of fourth place in the $75,000 NGA tournament at Pima.

Neilson, 69-69-61—199, is 14-under par after coming up with an eagle and eight birdies in his record Thursday round. His closest rival is another American, Alan Pate, with 201.

Booth, who had a pair of 69s in his first two rounds, shares fourth at 203 with three Americans — Kurt Cox, Roger Simpkins and Bruce Ashworth.

Bob Cox of Vancouver with a 71 and Kelowna's Dave Barr with a 70 are both at 212 while Victoria's Cec Ferguson is a stroke behind with an over par 213 on rounds of 68, 71 and 74.

Ferguson was even par after 13 holes Thursday but took a double-bogey five on the par three 14th and then bogeyed the east par-five 8th.

A Record Day For O.J.; Dallas Win Hurts Cards

By The Associated Press

Dallas stopped St. Louis on the Cowboy's eight-yard line with eight seconds left to win 19-14 Thursday and take a two-game lead over the Cardinals in the National Football Conference's East Division.

And Detroit Lions beat Buffalo Bills 27-14 to keep their slim hopes alive for a wild-card berth in the NFC.

But the star of Thanksgiving Day in the United States was Buffalo's phenomenal O. J. Simpson.

Simpson, rushing for an average of nearly 10 yards a crack, gained a National Football Leage record 273 yards, but it was in a losing cause as Greg Landry threw two touchdown passes to rookie tight end David Hill in the Lions victory over the Bills.

While rushing 29 times, Simpson broke his own record of 250 yards, piling up the fifth 200-plus game of his nine-year career. Simpson and former Cleveland Browns great Jimmy Brown had shared the NFL record of four 200-yard games.

The elusive speedster raced for touchdowns of 48 and 12 yards and passed the 1,00-yard mark for the fifth consecutive season. Simpson. the NFL's second leading career rusher, now has 1,129 yards this season and 9,252 career yards.

All of Simpson's heroics, however, could not keep the Bills, 2-10, from falling to their eighth defeat in a row. The Lions, meanwhile, kept their slim hopes alive for a NFC wild-card berth, evening their record at 6-6.

Besides the tandem of Landry and Hill, which combined for scoring aerials of 21 and 24 yards, the Lions scored on Dexter Bussey's run and Benny Ricardo's 22 and 35-yard field goal.

A 43-yard pass off a fake punt by Danny White to Benny Barnes set up a vital second-quarter touchdown for the Cowboys, 10-2, who held on dramatically when Jim Hart overshot tight end J. V. Cain on fourth down with eight seconds left.

The loss improved Washington's chances of becoming the wild-card team in the NFC. If St. Louis, 8-4, and Washington, 7-4, finish the season with the same record — and it is the best among non-division winners in the NFC — the Redskins will make the playoffs because they have beaten the Cardinals twice.

Dallas now has a record of 10 wins and two losses and should make the playoffs. They wind up against Philadelphia and Washington.

Green, Hayes Avoid Bogeys

MIYAZAKI, Japan (AP) — Defending-champion Hubert Green and Mark Hayes, both of the U.S.A., shared the opening-round lead with Australia's Graham Marsh with six-under-par 66s in the $200,000 Dunlop Phoenix golf tournament Thursday.

Green, who set a tournament record of 16-under-par last year, birdied four consecutive holes, including sinking an 18-foot putt on the ninth hole, and accounted for six birdies over all with no bogeys.

Hayes also had a flawless round with six birdies, four on the back nine, and no bogeys on the 6140-yard, par-72 Phoenix Country Club course.

Two strokes behind the leaders at 68 were David Graham of Australia and Yasuiro Miyamoto of Japan.

Tied at 69 were American Joe Inman, Brian Jones of Australia, and Japanese pros Shinsaku Maeda, Kikuo Arai and Kenji Mori. At two-under-par 70 were Ben Crenshaw, second on the U.S. money-winning list this year; Americans Eddie Pearce and Jerry Heard; Spanish star Severiano Ballesteros; Taiwan's Ho Ching-Ming, and four Japanese golfers.

UMPIRES HONORED

George Wetherell, George Tahouney and Andy George received the major trophies during the annual awards banquet of the Greater Victoria Umpires' Association.

George was honored as "umpire of the year" and Tahouney received an award as the most-improved umpire.

Tolos Takes Feature

John Tolos was the last man in the ring and won the seven-man battle royal that featured the professional wrestling card at Memorial Arena Thursday night.

An altered program was in effect because some of the wrestlers missed ferry connections.

Eric Frolich and Jerry Youngblood wrestled to a 20-minute draw in the opener; Afa Anoai defeated Sky-Hi-Morse; Tolos and Kurt Von Hess were both disqualified in their match for fighting out of the ring and Sika Anoai won the Polynesian strap match over Big John Quinn.

Others in the feature were Von Hess, Morse, Afa Anoai, Frolich, Youngblood and Jerry Goodvoice.

Four will top the next card, on Dec. 12.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Breaking into victory circle of Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest for second successive season is Cinday Margetish, who has captured women's fivepin award in seventh week of 14th annual competition. Cinday earned weekly award and qualified for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs as she topped distaff fivepinners with 221-340-330—891 series in Sunday Classic League at Chemainus Bowlarena.

Scorps Tackle Runners

"Run and Gun" is expected to be the name of the game when Victoria Scorpions take on Renton Roadrunners in two exhibition senior men's basketball games over the weekend.

Scorpions, beaten six times in 10 starts this season, will meet Renton on Saturday night at 8 p.m. at Mount Douglas High School and on Sunday at 12:30 p.m. in the old Uvic gymnasium.

Renton, who will have their two big men, George Carter, six feet, six inches; and Arvey Johnston, six feet, seven inches, in the lineup, defeated the Scorpions earlier in the season, but the Scorpions were without Bill Robinson, Bob Burrows and Brian MacKenzie for that game. All three will be in the lineup this weekend.

And as both clubs enjoy the running game, it should provide some wide-open action.

The series will serve as a tune-up for a big basketball jamboree the following weekend at the McKinnon Building Gymnasium.

Home Lumber, the Canadian women's champions, will play the visiting New South Wales team at 5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 3; Scorpions will play the Australian men's team at 7 p.m. and University of Victoria Vikings will meet Burnaby Bullets of the Dogwood League at 9 p.m.

On Saturday, Home Lumber will again meet New South Wales at 5 p.m. with Uvic playing Australia at 7 p.m. and Scorpions testing the Bullets at 9 p.m.

Tickets for each day are, adults, $2.50; students, $1.75; children, $1.50. They are available at Scorpion's Men's Wear and the UVic athletic office.

AROUND OUR SHORES

Some dinghy sailors, like Uwe Rohde for one, will go to almost any lengths to be able to enjoy a spot of racing competition.

Uwe, single-handed, sailed his 12-foot Kolibri 16 miles from Oak Bay Marina to Sidney on Saturday to join the Saanich Peninsula Sailing Association.

It took him from 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and his boat is now at Tulista Park, all set for Sunday's sailing, which begins at 1:30 p.m. Uew's trip back to town was much quicker . . . as a passenger in the car of club commodore Dave Myerscough.

Laser sailors at the Lester B. Pearson College also travel a fair way to take part in the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's series racing each Saturday. Last weekend four students made the water crossing.

But their voyage was much less strenuous and a great deal swifter. They made the trek aboard the college rescue boat, the dinghies being towed behind.

Bob Britten of RVYC won all three races on Saturday, edging out Barry Wright and Doug Gray in the first event and Ken Hellwig and Brian Robinson the second time around. Runners-up in the final race were Barry, followed by Brian. Series racing starts 1:30 p.m. this Saturday.

Fellow skippers of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, are honing Fred Douglas will keep his promise to put a television set in Vertu on Sunday when he helms her in the eight-mile race for the Gear Buster Trophy, set to start at 10 a.m.

That's the time of the Grey Cup football game start, too, and, Fred's attention divided, Vertu may be a little slower than she was last Sunday when she won the first race of the day and placed second in the other. Runners-up in the first sailout were Bernie Derible's Green Teal and Doug Turnham's Baracoutta. Vic Wauthier's Black Hawk won the second race and Doug Bond's Gwaihir captured third spot.

The squadron's centreboarders will also have series racing Sunday, starting at 10 a.m. The 420 fleet has now completed four series, each series having 16 races with four toss-outs.

Mike Barton and Mark Cummings won both A and B series. Second placers were Rick Jackson with Mike Wyeth and Tora Thyvold with Erin Murphy. Tora teamed up with her father, Olav, to come third in A series. Jack Bush and Jim West were third placers in B.

Tora and Erin won both C and D series, Jack and Jim placing second in both, Mike with John Banky placing third in both events. Mike and Mark won the Corky Cup for best average of A and B. Tora and Erin getting the Alf Powell Trophy for C and D best avearages.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club will hold the last of its six-milers for the season on Sunday, beginning in the vicinity of the Sidney government wharf at 10 a.m.

Jim Ross' Llanoria was over-all winner on Saturday. After her came Alec Marshall's Wisp, Steve Vagvolgyi's Fulmar, Paul Longridge's Saga, Roy Hingley's Romada, Ole Backhaus' Soria Moria, Willi Fahning's Dominique, Alan Dickinson's Viking, Ken Martin's Sana and V. A. Gait's Kai Malino.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association plans two more around-the-buoy races on Sunday. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Many of those taking part sailed last Sunday, in RVYC's long-distance race, which was won by Ted Trenholme's Impatience. Placing after her were Steve Merriman's Country Style, Bob Craig's Ailsa-Craig, Gerry Howell-Jones' Sian, Steve Donaldson's Tatoosh, Bob Van Den Driessche's Noosa, George Stricker's Servus, George Cesarec's Galeb and Fred Gardiner's Tringa.

SHORT TACKS — One of the most gold-plate sloops in the area was launched at Kingfisher Marina on Saturday. Built by Bent Jespersen Boatyard, she's a one-ton Peterson, almost 37 feet in length, and Greg Oliver of RVYC's The Distant Drummer. Triple planked, her two inner plankings are of cedar. Her decks are teak and her outer planking and cabinet work is of Honduras mahogany. Bent reports the only paint on her is on her bottom and boot-top.

ROLLIE FINGERS IS NOW A PADRE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Relief-pitcher Rollie Fingers signed a multi-year contract with San Diego Padres, Jerry Kapstein, his agent, said Thursday.

Kapstein reached agreement with Padres owner Ray Kroc and Buzzie Bavasi, general manager of the club, late Thursday and notified Fingers at his in-laws' home at San Jose, Calif.

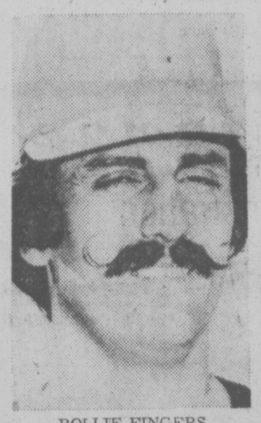

"Rollie Fingers was delighted to be joining Gene Tenace with the Padres," said Kapstein.

Tenace, a catcher-first baseman, and Fingers were team-mates with Oakland A's and were among eight Oakland players to become free agents this year.

Fingers was the 10th and final free agent represented by Kapstein, who was on the West Coast for the announcement of the signing Wednesday by California Angles of infielder' Bobby Grich, another of his clients.

Fingers became the 14th free agent to reach terms since the historic Nov. 4 draft and continued the trend of moving from teams with better records to teams with poorer won-lost marks.

With the signing of Fingers, the Padres completed their two-player limit and now drop out of the Reggie Jackson negotiations.

Fitch Mix Explodes

By The Associated Press

Although Bill Fitch is a National Basketball Association coach, he considers himself a chemist.

He likes mixing and matching his lineup, and Thursday night he came up with an explosive combination for Cleveland Cavaliers.

"It was time to search for a little different chemistry," Fitch said after his Cavaliers defeated Detroit Pistons 111-105 in a NBA game.

Bingo Smith and Jim Chones, who usually start for Cleveland, both were used in reserve roles and both provided needed relief off the bench.

Smith scored 10 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter to start a Cleveland rally.

Campy Russell started in place of Smith and Nate Thurmond was in the starting lineup ahead of Chones. Austin Carr was another rare starter in the new-look Cleveland roster and paced the Cavaliers with 23 points.

In other NBA games Thursday night, Paul Westphal contributed 26 points and Ricky Sobers 25 to lead Phoenix Suns to a 104-98 victory over Washington Bullets. Elsewhere, Rudy Tomjanovich scored 27 points in leading Houston Rockets over New Orleans Jazz 105-99, despite a 35-point showing by Pete Maravich.

REDMAN SIGNS PACT

HIGHLAND PARK, Ill. (Reuter) — Britain's Brian Redman, three-time North American Formula 5000 champion, has signed to drive for the Carl Haas-Jim Hall team in the 1977 season.

CENTRAL ARMY CLUB IN FRONT

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Central Army Sports Club, one of two teams to tour the United States last winter against the National Hockey League, leads the field after the first 15 rounds in the Soviet Ice Hockey championship, the Tass News agency said Thursday.

The club has won 13, lost one and drew one. Second-place Moscow Dynamos is seven points behind with eight wins, four losses and one draw. Last season's champion, Moscow Spartak, was in fifth place.

Airline Must Confess Ad Claims Were Wrong

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Civil Aeronautics Board judge has decided that Trans World Airlines should spend $1.6 million on advertisements telling the public that it is not the "on-time airline."

Administrative law Judge Ronnie Yoder's order must be approved by the full CAB before it can take effect.

If the order stands, TWA will be prohibited from referring to itself as "the on-time airline, or any similar discription."

In addition, it would have to advertise lists of all the towns where it did not have the best on-time performance during 1975; admit that no CAB records allow a system-wide comparison of time performance; and state that previous ads to the contrary were wrong.

To make such confessions the air line would have to spend six per cent of its 1975 advertising budget of almost $27 million — $1.6 million.

The decision said TWA failed to adequately set forth the basis for claiming on-time superiority and failed to state what routes it was talking about and the percentage of time it was on time.

CIA Withheld Files Tied to Kennedy Death

WASHINGTON (WP) — In late September 1963 — eight weeks before the assassination of President John Kennedy — Lee Harvey Oswald telephoned the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City and tried to make a deal.

In exchange for unspecified information, he wanted a free trip to Russia.

This conversation was intercepted and recorded by the Central intelligence Agency at the time. But it was not then turned over to the FBI, which has responsibility for investigating possible spies, and it was not later turned over to the Warren Commission during its investigation of the assassination.

The unanswered question is why not?

The existence of the CIA telephone intercept of Oswald's conversation in Mexico City and the contents of the still-secret transcript have been verified by The Washington Post. The Post has also verified that the CIA failed to turn over the complete transcript to either the FBI or the Warren Commssion.

Instead, the CIA gave the FBI in October, 1963, only a brief report saying Oswald had made contact with the Russians. It gave the Warren Commission a transcrint of the taped conversation but for unexplained reasons failed to include in the transcription Oswald's offer of information and his suggestion that the Russians would want to pay his way to the Soviet Union.

The Post has also determined that the CIA, for unexplained reasons, told the Warren Commission that it learned of most of Oswald's activities in Mexico City only after the assassination. The fact is, however, that the CIA monitored and tape-recorded his conversations with both the Russian and Cuban embassies in Mexico City in the fall of 1963, before Kennedy's death.

It was the CIA's belief that the two embassies were heavily into the spy business and that, specifically, they were operational bases for intelligence activities directed at the United States.

So, with the full co-operation of the Mexican government, CIA wiretaps were installed on telephone lines going into both embassies.

The CIA was especially interested in U.S. citizens who made contact with the embassies.

Thus, when Oswald showed up in Mexico City in late September and telephoned the Russian embassy, his conversation was picked up from the wiretap. A transcript was made and circulated in the CIA offices in the American Embassy in Mexico City.

The station chief, at that time, was the late Winston M. Scott, who personally reviewed all transcripts emanating from wiretaps on Soviet-bloc installations.

$190M TRAINING PROGRAM

TEHRAN (WP) — The United States and Iran have signed a $190.6 million contract that provides for U.S. experts to train Iranian air force personnel to manage the billions of dollars worth of equipment Iran has purchased from the United States.

The deal is the most ambitious attempt yet to resolve Iran's problems in operating the advanced military aircraft Tehran has been buying, U.S. defence officials here said in announcing the contract.

Under the contract, which was signed last week, American experts from the Lockheed Corp. will create an air force logistic command and train from 9,000 to 10,000 Iranians to man it, the officials said. Iran has an acute shortage of skilled technicians and middle-level managers.

U.S. air force personnel now perform many of the logistics and administrative tasks — such as budgeting, procurement, data services and co-ordinating supplies and maintenance — that are needed to run the Iranian air force.

U.S. air force personnel now perform many of the logistics and administrative tasks — such as budgeting, procurement, data services and co-ordinating supplies and maintenance — that are needed to run the Iranian air force.

Iran has purchased upwards of $10 billion in military equipment from the United States since 1973. If the air force training program is successful, similar programs may be set up for the Iranian Army and navy, officials said.

Tear Gas Envelopes Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A large quantity of teargas released near the Golden Gate Bridge hung in the fog, buring the eyes and noses of motorists early today, the California Highway Patrol said.

The gas, identified as CS teargas by a spokesman at the U.S. Army Presidio which borders the southern approach to the bridge, wafted through fog shrouded trees and across roadways sending at least four persons to hospitals for relief. The highway patrol advised motorists crossing the bridge to keep windows and vents tightly closed until the wind moved the gas-laden fog out to sea.

Military police and units from the San Francisco Police Department were checking the possibility the gas was released by vandals about 11:30 p.m. Thursday, the spokesman said.

Teargas induces vomiting and burning senstations to the eyes, nose and throat, but it is not believed to be permanently harmful.

An army spokesman said an investigation disclosed no leaks from teargas storage on the Presidio. The gas is stored in beer-can-size canisters, 50 to a case, he said. It would require release from five or six canisters to produce the amount of gas in the air, he added.

INMATES TO BE EXCHANGED

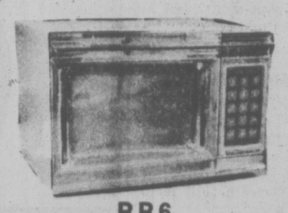

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — Mexico and the United States signed Thursday a treaty which opened the way for American prisoners held in jail here to return home.

But the estimated 600 U.S. prisoners here will not be exchanged for the 1,200 Mexicans held in U.S. jails until Congress ratifies the treaty — a process which might take about six months.

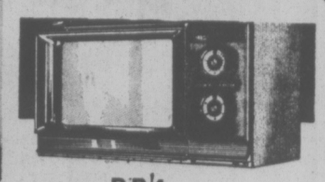

The treaty was proposed by the Mexican government last June in order to ease one of the major irritants between the two countries.

Under terms of the treaty, American prisoners will be able to choose whether to stay here or return home. The great majority of them are serving sentences of up to seven years on narcotics convictions.

FOOD CRISIS FORECAST

ROME (AP) — The head of the United Nation's largest agency, the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), has criticized both rich and poor countries for spending more money to buy weapons instead of to avert another food crisis that will be "worse than the one before."

Lebanon's Edouard Saouma also said he hopes U.S. President-elect Jimmy Carter will use this year's bumper U.S. harvest to fight starvation in other parts of the world.

"As a farmer, we don't expect less from him," Saouma said.

Saouma, a 30-year-old French-educated argronomist, spoke on the first anniversary of his appointment to head the FAO.

"The developed countries were asked to put aside for aid one per cent of their gross national product," Saouma said. "But the average has been 0.3 per cent.

"I would hope that a conference on disarmament would convince the developed countries to spend less on defence and on arms. But the developing countries must be blamed, too. I am not mentioning any names, but they are in the papers every day."

By contrast, he added, oil-producing countries "are really doing their job — giving an average of 2.6 per cent of their GNP in aid."

Of the world food situation, Saouma said: "Short-term outlook is encouraging. We expect world cereal production in 1976 to be more than 1.3 billion tons, which would be a rise of seven per cent over last year."

Sarkis Seeks Aid from the U.S.

BEIRUT — Beirut newspapers say President Elias Sarkis has asked the United States and oil-rich Arab countries to help prevent a Syrian-Israeli clash in southern Lebanon.

Syrian troops of an Arab peacekeeping army now occupy all of Lebanon except for a strip along the Israeli border.

Israel has massed troops and armor along the frontier after warning that it will not tolerate Syrian troops or Palestinian guerrillas too close to Israel.

Syrian troops and tanks are known to be entrenched 30 miles north of the Israeli border.

Leftist spokesmen say a planned southward advance by the Syrians has been suspended pending Sarkis' attempt to mediate.

Newspapers also reported that Israeli patrols had crossed into Lebanon and were checking cars on the border near the town of Kfar Kila, where there is a gate connecting the two countries.

Southern Lebanon is the only part of the country where fighting still continues in the 19-month civil war, brought to a close with the entry of the Arab peace force during the past weeks.

"Sarkis is worried about the south," said one source.

The Little, Gray Man . . . Power Behind the Method

By RICHARD COE
Washington Post

There seems nothing about the little gray man to suggest he has been a force in world theatre. His appearance, perhaps, is of a tailor on his way to synagogue and he says of himself: "Look at me. I had no personal or physical gifts of any kind."

Yet one night last week at New York's Pierre Hotel, Lee Strasberg celebrated his 75th birthday with such acclaimed American actors as Ellen Burstyn, the Tony-Oscar-Emmy triple crown winner; Al Pacino, Eli Wallach, Anne Jackson, Lee Grant, Estelle Parsons, George Peppard, Ben Gazzara, Shelley Winters, Joanne Woodward, Paul Newman, Jack Nicholson, Dustin Hoffman, Arthur Penn, Cliff Robertson, Eva Marie Saint, Alan Schneider, Elia Kazan and Mildred Dunnock. Julie Harris couldn't come, she is touring as "The Belle of Amherst." Working in California are Carroll O'Connor of "All in the Family" and Beatrice Arthur of "Maude."

What is the connection between these people and the little gray man?

All of them — and Marlon Brando — at one time or another have been coached in acting by Strasberg in an old New York church at 432 West 44th St. Between them they've won Tonys, Obies, 24 Oscars and 108 other Oscar nominations.

Unprepossessing as he may seem, Lee Strasberg has startling eyes, pale gray-blue behind thick-lensed spectacles. They are piercing, questioning and, well, cold. One would find it hard to dissemble before them.

Loosely, Strasberg is famous for "The Method" and is artistic director of the Actors' Studio. Marilyn Monroe's final years were spent under the influence of Strasberg and his late wife, Paula. Born in Russia of parents who had no background in the theatre, he was a founder of the Group Theatre and after some of its former members, Kazan and Cheryl Crawford, founded the Actors' Studio in 1949, he joined them to replace Robert Lewis as artistic director.

Basically, "The Method" stemmed from two Strasberg experiences, the 1922 New York visit by the Moscow Art Theatre and exposure to Konstantine Stanislavski, the Russian opera singer who sought to capture the ability to act at consistent levels.

So much garbage has been written about "The Method" and so much harm done in its name that Strasberg himself has been obscured. A talk with the guru himself is refreshing.

"Our procedure is an attempt to lead each actor to solve each acting problem in accord with the nature of his own individual material — as revealed to us by our understanding of this modern knowledge — so that it is possible, technically speaking, for that actor to become a completely functioning instrument."

The metaphore is a favorite. He speaks of the actor's physical need to keep in trim, that as the piano is the pianist, the body is the actor's instrument. The actor's mind cannot express itself without his physical powers, speech included.

"The Stanislavski method is not as new as we commonly think," Strasberg commented. "The work that we do is nothing but the sum total of the experiences of many great actors of the past, of the records and statments they have left and of what we have seen in our own experience.

"What Stanislavski tried to do was to make this material available to the young actor so that he doesn't have to go through 25 or 30 years of grueling experience to find these things for himself. The important things in "The Method' are the things that other actors of the past, great actors of the past, have used to train themselves so as to arrive at the wonderful results which all good actors achieve.

Divided into three units — actors, directors and playwrights — the Studio is not a school but a place where members share time and experience with others. Members are admitted twice yearly by Strasberg, Kazan and Crawford, whose choose maybe five or six from a thousand applicants for the lifetime privilege of prepared but informal, intimate meetings. Total enrolment has never reached 400, and many members are not in either New York or Los Angeles much of the time, but off on acting assignments. Benefits such as last week's birthday party help pay expenses.

Two years ago Strasberg took an acting assignment himself, his first since playing the peddler in "Green Grow the Lilacs," a 1931 play, which later became "Oklahoma!"

Strasberg's reversion to acting was Al Pacino's idea. As star of "The Godfather: Part Two," Pacino suggested his coach for the part of syndicate boss Hyman Roth. Strasberg responded: "How can a teacher refuse his student?" That led to another part in the suspense thriller "The Cassandra Crossing," recently completed in Europe, with such folk as Sophia Loren, Richard Harris, Burt Lancaster and O. J. Simpson.

After speaking in Washington recently, Strasberg smiled when a young voice asked how he had made the transition from coach to performer:

"I'd thought," he replied, "that the lights and bustle on the set, whether I'd remember my lines and the markers, those spots where you have to be exactly rooted for the camera, would be the problem.

"Not at all. They remained what they are, subsidiary matters. The main concern was, after all, the acting, the performance itself. The trivia fell into place."

REED TAKES COMMAND

REGINA — One of the largest divisions in the RCMP changed hands in Regina Thursday afternoon. Assistant commissioner John Gibbon, who has commanded F Division for the past 2½ years, handed the keys over to chief superintendent George Reed in a short and simple ceremony at the division headquarters in Regina. A 26-year veteran of the force, Reed joined the old British Columbia Provincial Police force in 1948. When the force was absorbed by the RCMP in 1950, he joined up. He served as assistant criminal investigation branch officer and offices commanding Regina subdivision from 1969 to 1972.

WINNIPEG — An American social worker says having babies out of wedlock is becoming a status symbol for teenage girls. Betty Schwartz, executive director of the Florence Crittendon Society in the state of Maryland, said Thursday communities must "unsell babies as a status symbol for young adolescents." For many girls the baby becomes "living proof that you have made it sexually; therefore you have made it as a human being," she said.

ATHENF — French oceanographer Jacques Cousteau has debunked the legend of Atlantis after completing 13 months of underwater archeological exploration in the Aegean Sea. "We find the Atlantis myth interesting from a human standpoint, but I believe the story was a model for a future society, not a historic fact," Cousteau told a news conference aboard Calypso, a former minesweeper converted into a research vessel "It is amazing how the story has lasted."

He's King Of Scotland Idi Tells Visitors

NAIROBI, Kenya — President Idi Amin of Uganda said today some Scots consider him to be the uncrowned "King of Scotland" and he would personally attend celebrations if Scotland ever becomes independent from the United Kingdom.

Radio Uganda quoted Amin as telling four Scottish visitors that when that country becomes independent from London — as some Scottish nationalists want — Amin personally "will attend the celebrations and will even send pipers from Uganda to entertain the people."

Amin told his visitors that "friends in Scotland have written to me to tell me that they regard me as King of Scotland," according to the broadcast.

Insanity Acquittal But Killer Must Pay

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Supreme Court has ordered a Windsor man who fatally stabbed another man to pay $46,405 and legal costs to the victim's family.

Th judgment was made against Amando De Santis, 48, who was acquitted of murder by reason of insanity in county court Sept. 22, 1974.

De Santis was charged after 41-year-old Filippo Squittieri, also of Windsor, was found stabbed to death. De Santis is now in medical confinement.

The Wagners: A 50s Dream Come True

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — They are asked what they'll be like when they grow old.

The question strikes them momentarily speechless.

"Well, I don't really think about age very much," says Robert Wagner.

They are perpetuating the sporty, glittery, youthful double-persona that made them teen-age idols in the '50s and have kept them fairly steadily before the camera's eager eye ever since.

Of course, they aren't Lunt and oFntaine. So what? They clearly deserve to be stars.

And they are capable of presentable, even exceptional acting performances.

Soon they will try to prove themselves in the heavyweight league with an already-taped TV production of Tennessee Williams' Cat on a Hot Tin Roof.

Wagner calls Natalie "Natalie." She calls him "R.J." because his middle name is John.

They cuddle up on the couch of their hotel suite after gobbling up two gooey Rueben sandwiches.

This dream took some doing, however. First they married in 1957, Wood divorced Wagner in 1962.

They each married other people, got divorces, then remarried each other.

In January they will celebrate their first fifth anniversary. Earlier this year they won a lawsuit against a London newspaper which had claimed they were going to divorce again.

Asked if there is anything about their present lives they would like to change, Wagner replies, "Not a thing that I can think of."

She is wearing a white suit, a plump red heart among the jewelry around her neck, and her eyes are completely outlined in black, which seems just right.

He still looks like he will meet you on the courts in five minutes and call you "old man."

Remember when she went hysterical in the bathtub in Splendour in the Grass? Remember when he tossed his hat overboard and it landed among floating pieces of ice in Titanic? Of course you do.

Both of them are Hollywood babies and both of them made lots of movies in the '50s. Wood's were recalled not so long ago at a San Francisco film festival retrospective.

"Ohhhhh," says Wood, giving him a nudge as if embarrassed.

"It was a wierd experience looking at all those clips," she says, fingering the heart.

"It was all so odd. I looked so much like my daughter when I was about 11. Some of the movies I remember very well and others I don't."

"Driftwood," says Wagner. "You remember Driftwood."

"Yes," says Wood, "and even though I don't really remember Tomorrow Is Forever I remember Orson Welles and Claudette Colbert very vividly."

Some of their films they would like to forget.

"I was never too pleased with Prince Valiant," says Wagner, but the picture was a big hit and helped establish him as a '50s icon even though he had to wear a silly wig for the role.

As a child star, Wood appeared in that now-perennial Christmas ornament, Miracle on 34th Street.

Last Christmas she and Wagner ran it for their children, Kate, 12, Natasha, 6, and Courtney, almost 3. Courtney is the only child Wood and Wagner have had together.

"No, they just got a little bored," says Wood. "The only people terribly moved by it were our parents. When the lights came up, there were tears streaming down their cheeks."

New Byron Poem Found

LONDON (Reuter) — A poem believed to be by the young Lord Byron has been discovered hand-written in a book that belonged to a female friend.

The eight lines are an ode to a girl's lock of hair which it is thought the British romantic poet wrote for Miss Elizabeth Pigot in 1806 when he was 18.

The pencilled lines in Byron's hand are on the flyleaf of a book of poems by Robert Burns. Miss Pigot, five years older than Byron, was one of his earliest female friends and encouraged him to write verse.

The book turned up in 1973 during the sale of contents of the Nottinghamshire country house where Miss Pigot had lived. An antique dealer bought it, together with three other Burns volumes, unaware of the Byron poem and attracted by the calfskin binding.

SEMEN GONE

CHILLIWACK (CP) — RCMP are investigating the disappearance of about $3,000 worth of bull semen from a truck belonging to the Chilliwack Artificial Insemination Centre. The truck was stolen on Saturday and recovered later in the day, but police say the semen and annotrogen storage tank were missing.

Report Bares Science Fakes

LONDON (Reuter) — Many scientists may be faking their findings, says a report published Thursday in New Scientist magazine.

The magazine asked scientists in a questionnaire whether they knew of cases of "intentional bias" — faking results to make experiments appear well-conceived and important. Ninety per cent of 200 serious replies reported knowledge of such cases.

University scientists proved the worst offenders. Most cheaters were discovered by other scientists trying to duplicate the experiments.

Those who replied said the gains from such frauds are often nothing, but a few cases led to promotion. However, 10 per cent of the cheaters were dismissed.

Some scientists implied that drug companies encourage them to cheat by being obsessed with getting positive results, while one forensic scientist said it is not unusual for the police to indicate the sort of forensic evidence they would prefer.

Some of those who replied included self-incriminating material, apparently as a means of purging their consciences.

Dr. Ian St. James-Roberts, who ran the survey, admitted it was "clearly a very biased one." Much of the evidence is second-hand and many of those who replied may have been biased against certain colleagues.

Compelling Play Suffers from Poor Pacing

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Lillian Hellman's compelling play about greed and the venal manoeuvring of a predatory family, The Little Foxes, is well worth the revival being given it by Victoria Theatre Guild at Langham Court.

It is one of the most powerful and finely constructed plays of this century and familiarity no more weakens the impact than do production weaknesses.

Actually the Guild production, directed by Hetty Clews, which opened Thursday shows a considerable feeling for the play and its dramatic shape. What was mostly missing in the first night performance was the pacing that would have provided a steady sort of jungle-beat primitivism to the whole proceedings.

Monica Jarvis, for example, understands the character of Birdie perfectly well.

In this turn-of-the-century tale of Hellman's own deep south, Birdie is the only "aristocrat," a Hubbard by marriage but not by nature. Ms. Jarvis clearly knows what Birdie has been in her youth, what has hapened to her, why she is not a timorous wine-soaked creature.

But the performance is less than what it should or could be because there is a fine distinction between naturalism and realism and Birdie in this case not only appears to be low-keyed and indefinite, she is, with the result that the fibre of the play weakens during her scenes.

Tentativeness in grasping their roles, which may only be the result of first night jitters, also eclipses potentially acceptable performances by Lily Flanjak as the 17-year-old Alexandra to whom the ultimate climax of the play belongs, and Sonia Lazarus as the black servant, Addie.

More vocal strength and feeling for tempo is needed by both these actresses although both have qualities of warmth and sensitivity.

Most convincing and strongest performances are provided by Angela Henry, beautiful and icey as the arch conniver, the ruthless Regina Hubbard; Jack Droy and Adrian Jarvis as her brothers and Ned Lemley as her embittered and doomed husband.

A cameo role is rather beautifully and affectingly done by Tshanga as Cal, the black houseman. Robert Warren's Leo, worthy son of the despicable Oscar, is quite well handled by Robert Warren although his speech needs clarifying and certainly the role demands a hair trim. Jim Dunn is effective in a short scene as a Chicago businessman.

Costuming is particularly well done for this production and while the set works at a practical level with its vistas of dining room, hall and staircase, the decor is confused and lacks any real period feeling. Some genuine Victorian furnishing helps in this regard however.

The Little Foxes will continue through Dec. 4 with curtain at 8:15 p.m.

KEEP BOOTS CLEAN TO RETAIN VALUE

MONTREAL (CP) — The year-around wearability of suede and leather boots makes them a great value only when they are properly cared for, says Del Foxton, a specialist in leather care.

For instance, she said, if boots were put away last spring without a cleaning, chances are that they look pretty sad this season.

Foxton said that there is a remover available on the market for salt stains.

"With this liquid you can remove the white salt stains from leather or suede boots," she said, "However, if after you have washed your boots the white marks are still on the boot, the salt may have removed the dye from the leather or suede."

She said if this is the case, suede boots can be repaired by spraying on a suede renewer that comes in three basic colors — brown, black and blue.

Foxton said that to keep boots in good condition, a protector should be applied. This comes in the form of a spray with a built-in waterproofing agent.

"It is important that you continue protection all winter long and that you remove salt from boots after each wearing," said Foxton. "Also, never dry boots near a radiator or any direct heat as it will harden them."

She suggested that because of the varied weather in winter, women might be wise to own two pairs of boots, leather or suede, for snow and rubber, or vinyl for wet, slushy days.

Japan Fashion Big in Paris

PARIS (AP) — This city could be called Tokyo-by-the-Seine these days, with all the interest in Japanese fashions made in France.

Issey Miyake has turned out a beautiful ready-to-wear collection for spring-summer of 1977, stunning a packed house at the Salle Wagram dance hall with his original use of fabrics and colors.

After some sexy one-piece synthetic satin swimsuits with wrap-around braided ribbons, he showed bloomer-shorts with big blousy kimono tops, longer bloomers, floppy pants sometimes gathered at the ankle and easy long kimonos for beach wear. Huge sashes or fanny wraps have become a familiar Japanese trademark.

Above-the-knee short skirts looked sporty. Some button-up cotton skirts in lovely pastel shades were shown topped with ample hip-length, large-checked blouses.

One of his best ideas was a series of dresses with camp but fascinating paintings of beach scenes on the backs of black silk dresses or on huge shawls.

Throughout the collection electric reds and peacock blues, sharp greens and black were used happily together, offset by ventures into soft pastels from light apricot, sea green and pearly grey to dusky blue, purple and raspberry red.

Jean-Charles de Castlebajac is a young Frenchman with a good name who is vaguely associated with the same fashion group as Miyake, but his approach is quite different.

Castlebajac showed natural colors — lots of off-white, khaki, olive and tan in raw linens and canvas-interspersed with flashes of tomato red and deep turquoise, plus a big series of beachwear in horizontal stripes.

He likes work clothes and lots of flap or open pockets are a trademark. Even his one-piece bathing suits had a little flap under the bosom. Short and long beach cover-ups, many in ample poncho forms, were shown with pointed hoods, which Castlebajac always loves.

Be Careful When Choosing a Designer

By LYNNE GORDON

A flair for design does not an interior decorator make.

But the definition of who is and who isn't is rather a difficult one in the designing industry. Consumers who must choose a designer to plan a home they will have to live in for many years, have almost nothing to go on when it comes to evaluating a designer.

According to Ray Staples, an executive with the Interior Designers of Ontario, a professional is anyone who has three or four years schooling in interior design, three or four years working under a qualified design studio, is willing to show you photographs of his or her work and give you bonafide references.

Designers can come from two main areas and have a variety of ways they can ethically charge for their work.

Department stores have trained staff who have already been screened and have the educational qualifications and credentials to be able to call themselves interior designers.

Before you choose a designer from a department store, make sure you like the type of merchandise they stock, because once you have signed a contract for their services, you will be required to buy most of the items from that store.

This is quite valid, since the designer is on salary and you get his services free of charge when you buy merchandise over a pre-set amount.

The desgner may have to charge commission if you want his advise on some hard-to-find antique or specially-constructed furniture that the store can't provide.

On the whole, this is a good way for people on a budget to work, since they have the opportunity to walk around the store and point out the kind of furniture, carpets, drapes and lamps they prefer. This can save a great deal of valuable, costly time.

Reputable designers rarely charge for the first visit, which is more getting acquainted than actually working. Some stores do charge an initial consulting fee after the first visit, and quite legitimately. This is to cut down the number of consumers who just wander through the store to pick their brains and move on to the next designer.

The independents have their own shops or operate from their homes. Both types can be just as good if they have similar credentials. The main difference is that the one working out of a home has chosen this method to avoid high overhead and payrolls. In either case the charge can be about the same.

Usually a designer will buy merchandise at wholesale prices and his or her fee will come from the mark-up.

For example, a couch that your designer chooses may retail for $500 but they may be able to get it for about $325. The consumer is charged the retail price and the difference pays for the designer's time in planning, shopping and delivering the merchandise.

If there is a particularly good piece in a retail store or an antique shop that the designer can't find from a manufacturer, he may be able to negotiate as 10-per-cent reduction which he will accept. If there is no discount, the designer may charge an hourly rate for his time in going to the store with you to look at the piece and make sure it fits in with the over-all design.

Some designers work on a cost-plus basis, in which they sell the merchandise at wholesale prices plus 10 per cent for handling. In addition they will charge a flat fee for the time they spend choosing the items and planning the overall effect.

How sesigners work depends on their overhead, the size of their payroll. No matter how they charge, you should insist that this is spelled out in every detail and that everything is clearly understood before entering into the contract.

An estimate for a purchase should also clearly state the description of what you are buying and the quality you expect.

But the most important ingredient in the who's relationship — and that's precisely what it is because of its very personal nature — is trust. You will be working together and if you are hiring a designer, that probably means you have little time or opportunity for comparison shopping yourself. Many of the things you will be buying will only be available to your designer so you can't compare prices — they are specialty items.

It's easy to throw caution to the winds — especially if the designer comes recommended by a friend or an acquaintance.

Columnist Appointed To Council

Columnist and consumer expert Lynne Gordon, whose Caveat Emptor column is carried weekly in the Times has been appointed the next chairman of the Ontario Status of Women Council, a post vacated by another Toronto Sun writer, Laura Sabia.

Gordon who was nominated as a Woman of the Year during International Women's Year, is "flattered and pleased to accept the appointment." She will not be resigning from her present duties.

"I believe I have enough energy to handle both jobs," says Lynne, who believes her background in investigative reporting and her ability to cut through red tape and get to the heart of an issue will be an asset in her new role.

"I have always been very interested in people and have fought for their rights, so working for women will be an extension of that," she says.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

...it tells you how

Bedpans, old washtubs, pieces of barbed wire, and worn-out auto parts are just so much junk to most people . . . but to Stanley (he goes by one name) of Key Largo, Florida, these items — and others like them — are the stuff of which art is made.

A welder by trade — and a satirist at heart — Stanley transforms metallic miscellany into artistic creations such as you see here . . . creations which, more often than not, are tongue-in-cheek comments on today's civilization.

Stanley created his first sculpture (a two-faced man made of old wheels) as the result of a run-in with a local bigwig. Appropriately, his second figure was a two-faced woman (inspired, perhaps, by an unsuccessful romance?). Then came all kinds of lifelike creations: A pelican made from a bedpan. A big fish fashioned from used Volkswagen parts. A washwoman constructed of who knows what. And a wild wheeler-dealer made mostly of — what else? — wheels.

Key Largo's residents seem to take a mixed view of the metallic effigies which adorn the vacant lot beside Stanley's shop. Are they art? Are they junk? Who knows? But at least they're recycled!

A vaccine to combat malaria, which still takes an enormous toll all over the world, is in its planning and working stages in experimental animals.

Skin grafting is sometimes a precarious matter of hope and despair. Some skin grafts do not "take" and consequently do not accomplish their purpose. Now, a special type of X-ray exposure, when used to conjunction with bone marrow cells, can increase the possibility of a successful skin graft.

Experimental work has begun in anticipation of long space voyages. In a vessel that has limited space it is obvious that not enough food, oxygen and water can be stored for voyages of many months.

Devices are now in experimental use to recycle water and oxygen for repeated use. Special synthetic diets are being tried to meet the needs of the body in stressful circumstances while living in zero gravity.

A group of experimental animals was subjected to vibrations, to crowding and to taped subway noises.

How to Treat Plants Right

The Formula

By NORMAN H. STARK

My wife and partner, Eileen, has an amazing way with plants and children. Her method, as far as I've been able to understand it, is to be firm while being fair and just. This philosophy of hers has resulted in four lovely daughters, all of whom have done well, and a jungle of house plants that threatens to "take over" our living area.

It may seem far-fetched to some, as it once was to me, but she does have a rapport with her plants. Her formula seems to be, "I'll treat you right, and then I expect you to treat me right." And they do.

Her two most important elements, as far as both children and plants are concerned, are love and a good diet.

But there's another factor that's important. Some plants prefer an acid soil and some an alkaline. So here are two formulas that will increase or decrease the alkalinity or acidity of the soil.

If you need to increase the acid in the soil, four tablespoons of powdered alum (can be found at drug stores) in a quart of water will do it. Or, if you want to increase the alkalinity, the same amount of bicarbonate of soda will accomplish it.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: I am writing about my out-of-this-world gloxinia. It wasn't always. I bought it four years ago, a beautiful mass of deep red ruffled blooms, fringed in white. It came up the second year with a couple of blooms, just a straggly green plant. So I relegated it to the back of the shelf and forgot it.

Occasionally I spilled or dashed a bit of water on it while watering the other plants. This spring I needed the pot; I dug it out and discovered two green sprouts, so I gave it a stay of execution. I read in your column, and not a moment too soon, that gloxinias like lots of water, humidity and bright light.

I let the poor thing grow — didn't even bother to repot from the four-year-old dirt. I surrounded it with little dishes of water, put in a plant-watering gadget and kept it full of water with liquid plant food added, all in a sunny western window. And did it grow!

It's been in bloom a month, with no less than five beautiful flowers on each stalk and more coming, deep cups of rich red beauty. The leaves are crisp and green and the size of my hand. It's gorgeous. So thank you, Lynn and Joel. You certainly know your gloxinias. — M.S.

DEAR M.S.: You provided that special ingredient — love. Thanks for your delightful letter.

Pain Syndrome Is Recognized

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Pain is no longer considered just a symptom but has been recognized as a medical syndrome, says the North American vice-president of the International Association for the Study of Pain.

Dr. Ronald Melzack told 150 medical professionals that pain has been recognized as a "medical problem in its own right" in the last 10 years.

Dr. Melzack is a psychology professor at McGill University and author of a book called the puzzle of pain.

Dr. Melzack said recognition of pain as a syndrome has helped those in the medical field gain more knowledge in treating pain, but he added that none of it "is so extraordinary if you read the literature available on pain — the fact that pain takes away pain is something which has been known for years."

He said if a person suffering injury has another outlet on which to concentrate pain, it can be rejected.

Dr. Melzack said that when an injury occurs a message is sent to the spinal cord and it is either accepted or rejected. Substantia gelatinosa, a substance in the spinal cord, is the actual accepter or rejector of pain.

He added it is the small nerve fibres which create the most pain.

Stimulation of acupuncture and trigger points both are effective in relieving pain, he said.

Trigger points work on the same basis as acupuncture points "but nobody really knows their origin. They're physiologically abnormal."

He described as unusual a type of pain called phantom limb pain which means an amputee feels as though the limb still exists and can feel pain in the limb as well.

Dr. Melzack said that this can be effectively treated by electrical stimulous, massage, spinal cord lobotomies or whirlpool baths.

A spinal cord lobotomy, he explained, can help relieve pain for years or even permanently "since the major pathway of pain is severed."

Dr. Malzack pointed out that no pain treatment is infallible, but that they do work often enough to be considered acceptable.

He said that there is a psychological influence involved in pain and said that North Americans are endowed with a high pain threshhold. He said that the influences include culture, past experience, mood and even perspiration changes in blood flow and tension.

It is not necessary to preheat an oven when you are roasting a large cut of meat.

Immoral Advice?

DEAR ABBY: I wish you would please stop sending people to doctors just because they aren't sex maniacs.

My husband, at 58, mind you, started listening to all those sex-crazy men at work and decided that something must be wrong with him because he lost interest in sex. Then he went to his doctor who told him that some sex expert named Kinsey took a vote and found out that most men never wear out.

Now really! I wonder who he asked? Probably a lot of men who were ashamed to tell the truth.

Well, anyhow, this doctor told my husband if he wanted to get his manhood back, he should imagine that he was in bed with a beautiful young woman he had seen in the movies or on TV! How do you like the nerve of that doctor, giving my husband permission to think all those filthy, adulterous thoughts while he was in bed with me!

I'm a God-fearing, church-going woman, Abby and I think that doctor should lose his license for handing out immoral advice. You opinion, please.—DISGUSTED.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Although fantasies are a part of every normal person's life, there is a Biblical injunction against "thinking adulterous thoughts." If such advice were given by a preacher, he might lose his licence to preach, but doctors aren't preachers.

DEAR ABBY: A handsome little fellow in our neighborhood has been pretending that he is a dog ever since he was a toddler, and now he is nearly kindergarten age.

He doesn't just "pretend" he's a dog, he actually acts like one. He makes barking and whining sounds just like his dog. I think he would eat and sleep with his dog if he were allowed to.

It is not the normal love of a boy for his dog, Abby. I asked him why he likes to pretend he's a dog, and he said, "Because it's more fun to be a dog!" He cannot talk plainly but he seems intelligent otherwise.

Shouldn't his mother be told that her child may need special guidance or treatment? Sometimes parents are so close to a situation they can't see it. How can I tell her? We are just nodding neighbors.—CONCERNED.

DEAR CONCERNED: It's awkward to go from a nodding acquaintance with your neighbor to a heart-to-heart discussion about her child's development. If you're truly concerned initiate a closer friendship with her. (P.S. When the child goes to kindergarten, his teacher will surely recognize the problem, if there is one.)

DEAR ABBY: Seems like many of your female readers are fascinated with silicone. What are they trying to prove?

I live in a city that thinks it needs to be bigger. They put up large, cheap buildings that make the city look bigger. But it's still the same old city — only its troubles are magnified.

In other words, bigger isn't necessarily better. A gentle, modest curve beneath a sweater remains alluring, and realness in personality and everything else is more appealing than affectations.—ADMIRING OBSERVER.

Kiwifruit Has Future

LA GRANGE, Calif. (AP) — The kiwifruit looks like a hairy brown chicken egg, but enthusiastic farmers are calling it the fruit of the future.

Forty years after its vigorous, twining vines first took root in the United States, the kiwi is gaining wider distribution. Growers say they expect production to skyrocket in the next few years.

"It's the fruit of the future," says Ted Shurtleff, who with several partners has put in 20 acres in San Luis Obispo County. "It's delicious, can be stored for weeks in home refrigerators and make a spectacular jam."

Adulterer Fined

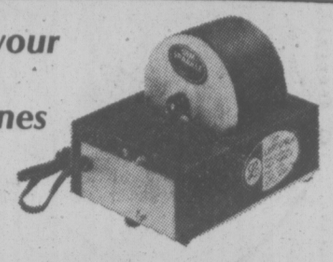

MADRID (AP) — An unidentified Spanish woman was sentenced Wednesday to seven months in prison and ordered to pay her husband $746 indemnity after being convicted of adultery by a Madrid court.

	NORTH ♠ 5 ♡ Q J 10 8 3 ◇ A K J 10 7 4 2 ♣ —
WEST ♠ K 10 9 6 4 ♡ A K ◇ Q 6 3 ♣ J 6 2		EAST ♠ Q 7 3 2 ♡ — ◇ 9 8 5 ♣ A 10 7 5 4 3
	SOUTH ♠ A J 8 ♡ 9 7 6 5 4 2 ◇ — ♣ K Q 9 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	3 ◇	4 ♠
Dbl.	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

During the past decade, a new defensive bid has come into being. It is known as the "unpenalty double." The bid works in the following manner.

When, in a competitive bidding auction, one side voluntarily arrives at a slam contract, a double by an opponent states: "Partner, I have no prospect of winning a trick." But if he passes instead, he announces that he has a trick or two, and has hopes of defeating the slam.

His partner, in either case, can now determine whether the slam bidders should be allowed to play at their contract; or whether his side should sacrifice against the slam in their agreed-upon suit. If both of the defenders appraise their hands correctly, they will know whether a sacrifice bid is in order or not.

But, at times, paradoxical situations develop, as can be observed in today's deal, which was played in a team-of-four match.

When the deal was played originally, West, possessing the ace and king of trumps, quite naturally doubled South's six-heart contract. By establishing the board's diamond suit, South lost only two trump tricks, and incurred a one-trick set.

On the replay, the bidding was identical except for West's final bid. Instead of doubling, he passed; and South went down the same one trick, undoubled.

It may seem unbelievable that a player, holding the ace and king of the opponents' trump suit, would not double their slam for penalties. But, unfortunately for East-West, they were playing the "unpenalty double"; and had West doubled, East would have correctly interpreted the double as showing no defensive tricks. East, having only one defensive trick, the ace of clubs, would then almost surely have made the sacrificial bid of six spades, on the assumption that North-South would fulfill their six-heart contract.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, November 27

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Friends and money will not mesh, the mixture could turn sour. Know it and act accordingly. Be responsible, exercise capabilities. Don't pull punches. Accent on understanding children, serious relationship, financial matters. You emerge victorious, having learned some hard lessons.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Element of timing or luck is apt to be with you. Accent on finishing a project, gaining credit for efforts, relating to professional superiors. There is room for you at top and now you'll know it. Some of your friends, though slightly envious, will agree your views have been vindicated.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight greater originality. Be independent, willing to take a chance on your own abilities. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. Emphasis on ability to perceive potential. Travel plans are subject to revision. Be wary of "garbled" communications.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be perceptive enough to reject the superficial. Go for quality and story in-depth. Emphasis on love, deep feelings, ability to untangle financial confusion affecting partner, mate. Aquarius, Leo individuals figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Efforts may be scattered — see picture as a whole. Leave fine points, details for another time. Emphasis on legal and other ties, publicity and popularity in general. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. Social life accelerates.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Indirect approach could bring most constructive results. Be familiar with basic material. Ride with tide. Preparation is key to success. A supposed "secret" might become a burden. Be sure you were not left holding proverbial bag.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You're able now to come up with answers. What was evasive becomes available. Romance, change, variety and love are very much in picture as relationship intensifies. Friend with problem confides — don't cast first stone. One close to you "confesses" past indiscretion. Be grownup, compassionate!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good news received from "unexpected" source. Some adjustments occur at home base. Money, budget, costs of luxury items command attention. Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently. Older, authority individuals may feel they have "divine right" to tell you what to do. Dispel them of that belief!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What seems obvious could be a delusion. Know it and be cautious. Play waiting game. Time is on your side. Don't be rushed into decision — or action. Pisces, Virgo persons are in picture. Accent on messages, intructions, short trips, relatives who have an axe to grind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money, investments, ability to understand where a relationship is going — these are stressed. Past commitments surge to forefront. Older individual lends benefit of experience. Member of opposite sex supports your efforts, encourages and proves invaluable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is high — you are psychologically ready to win over odds, to finish what you start, to imprint style, to make favorable impression, to win contest. Partner or mate, lately depressed, will be reasonable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get hope, encouragement, what appeared a delay or setback boomerangs in your favor. Aquarius person does something "important." Travel, telegram, call seem to be high on agenda. You are vital and member of opposite sex is very much attracted.

IF NOVEMBER 27th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are dynamic, aggressive, have had emotional rug pulled from under you this year — you are making comeback, handling more responsibility, becoming more confident in personal relationships. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You get a real "second chance" in December — and in 1977 you are on the way to a more independent, creative lifestyle. Everything could be coming up roses!

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"We need better public transit," declared Peter. "Tonight there were about forty in my bus when we started."

Ann shook her head. "It gets worse every year. So you had to stand."

"Sure, but not for long," Peter replied. "It's funny the way the number went. Each stop exactly half the passengers got out and three got in. When we reached my stop there were only seven of us passengers in the bus."

How many when the bus started?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: WRONG was 10498 (even).

Rhubarb Can Be Grown Indoors

Looking forward to stalks of fresh young rhubarb by the middle of January? You can, if there is a place in or around your home to keep a deep box in a warm dark place.

Rhubarb has a long history of use, particularly in China where it left records dated several thousand years B.C. The plant is long-lived in the garden and easy to grow if given a deep soil free from winter flooding.

A rich soil is required for tender quick growth of rhubarb. Give a spring and fall top dressing of old manure and compost soil. A spring dressing of bonemeal and wood ashes is also helpful.

The rhubarb for eating in January comes from a root now in the garden. Choose one from which you pulled only a very few stalks this last spring or early summer. If well watered during summer with plentiful stems and large leaves, the root will now be in good condition to force in warmth.

We have found that rhubarb comes into growth earlier if the chosen root is left out (with soil attached) for two or three nights of frost. This weekend may provide the required condition.

Meanwhile prepare the box and the place to keep it while the stalks grow.

When the complete root is lifted, you have an idea of the size of box needed. You may knock one together from old wood or have a deep planter or tub of suitable size. There must be space to fill in with damp soil, leaf mould or even peat since the feeding roots will not be active, but surrounding moisture is needed constantly.

Place the root in the container with the damp mixture closely arround to exclude air. Soak the contents. Do not cover the crown. You should be able to see the beginning of knobby growth on top.

When you first decide to bring in a rhubarb root to force, look around for the warm dark place for the box. It will need dampening during the six weeks or more under cover, so it can scarcely go in the broom cupboard or under the bed. But a crawl space with hot water pipes, or a furnace room with an average temperature between 16 and 21 deg. C. can be ideal.

A warm corner of the basement, completely darkened, or in a heated greenhouse near hot water pipes or a heater, these are also possibilities. Remember complete darkness is essential especially in the early stages of forcing.

Two or three layers of damp sacking laid over the crown, a little raised to prevent rotting of the buds, will help in starting action after the warmth begins to penetrate.

The starting warmth may be 7 deg. C. gradually increasing to 21 deg. C.

There will be only the one pulling from one root, according to the number of growth buds visible. If successful and you find it worthwhile, plan to bring in a succession of roots next winter.

Best results are from rhubarb plants not pulled at all the previous spring; and those forced in winter need two years of outdoor growing to become productive again.

Considering the price of forced stems in late winter, gardeners who like this fruit will find it pays to grow their needs.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Rockland Townhouse Okayed

Victoria city council Thursday rezoned a three-quarter-acre site on Pemberton Road, in the Rockland area, for a nine-unit townhouse development to be built by Tod-Hackett Construction Ltd.

Approval of the rezoning bid came more than five months after a June 16 public hearing, at which scores of Rockland-area residents turned out to oppose the development.

Among the objections raised at that time were concerns on over-high density, traffic problems and possible harm to Rockland's unique residential quality.

Objectors cited the nearby Rockland Square townhouse development by another developer as an example of inappropriate development. Architect for both schemes was John Di Castri.

Rockland Area Association president John Graeme asked council at the June hearing not to approve the Tod-Hackett application until the effects and impact of the Rockland Square project could be properly assessed.

In other business Thursday, council turned down a rezoning application by Cana Construction Ltd. for a 29-unit townhouse development between Gladstone and Vining.

Although the Advisory Planning Commission had supported the proposal, saying it would help meet the demand for family-type housing in the Fernwood-Gladstone area, a number of residents spoke against it at the public hearing.

Many felt the density was too high, and that the development would create serious traffic problems in an already-congested network of streets.

Neil, Wilton, 1304 Vining, said there is a "pretty incredible flow of traffic" there already and more dwellings would bring added dangers to neighborhood children who have only the streets to play in.

Soviet Women Like 'Cowboys'

MOSCOW (AP) — The journal Literary Gazette says dozens of irate men have written to complain that liberated Soviet women are losing their femininity—smoking, drinking, cursing and indulging in free sex.

In fact, the Soviet Union's new breed of working women have forgotten how to be women, the weekly newspaper's readers say in the latest issue.

"Every man dreams of a woman who's soft, loving, expressive, affectionate, modest and shy, of a feminine woman," writes Grigory Molodtsov from the town of Volzhsky. "But they're getting harder and harder to find.

"Men are getting fed up with crude women who have the manners of cowboys. Their bossy shouts around the house, their shabby way of dressing and their swaggering way of drinking bottoms-up like a man turns the home into a crude barracks."

I. Zimin of Leningrad agrees. Women these days try to act like men, "smoking, drinking, cursing and engaging in free love," he says.

But now, he says, "it's hard to distinguish the girls from the guys: their vulgar laugh, swaggering walk, cigarettes."

And their language—not just on construction sites but in offices—"makes even strong men blush," he writes.

Since the war, women have assumed an ever-greater share of the Soviet workload. They now make up about 52 per cent of collective farm workers and 48 per cent of factory workers, recent statistics show.

Other statistics show that women continue to run Soviet homes and raise children, adding another four to five hours to each workday.

The Soviet press has acknowledged the problems involved in reconciling the dual roles of women, and social planners are trying to ease the burden with playschools for children and take-out meals for quick dinners.

But, attitutes of both men and women toward women are changing slowly.

A man from Tbilisi described the model wife as "an able and hospitable housewife, clever adviser and non-pestering satellite."

Negotiations Start

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Negotiations for a first contract between Local 1-424 of the International Woodworkers of America and the government-owned Plateau Mills Ltd. of Vanderhoof began Wednesday. The IWA recently won certification to represent about 225 employees of the sawmill. Details of union demands were not revealed.

Privileges Lost

ROME (Reuter) — The Roman Catholic church will lose special privileges in Italy under official proposals for a sweeping reform of church-state relations.

Premier Giulio Andreotti announced Thursday that experts appointed by Italy and the Vatican have reached agreement on a drastic revision of the 1929 concordat, or treaty, governing relations between church and state.

Under the draft reform, the Roman Catholic church will lose its legal status as Italy's official religion, and will give up its special rights in marriage laws, religious education and other privileges.

The concordat has long been criticized as out of date.

It clashes with modern realities such as the introduction of divorce in Italy in 1970, and also contradicts the spirit of the 1962-65 Vatican council which decreed that the Roman Catholic church was prepared to renounce state privileges.

Fishing Limit Set

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — Mexico and the U.S. signed a fishing agreement Wednesday that will sharply reduce the catch by U.S. vessels in coastal waters here. Under the agreement both countries recognized each others' new 200-mile marine limits, within which they claim exclusive fishing and mineral rights.

HENDERSON

$2M TO SWISS BANKS

Gov't Firm Gave Kickbacks—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today hw was told 3½ years ago that a government-owned company paid nearly $2 million in kickbacks to customers either in cash or in numbered Swiss bank accounts.

But the prime minister said that although he passed the information along to cabinet colleagues he has no evidence that any action was ever taken.

A letter former auditor-general Maxwell Henderson sent to Trudeau in March, 1973, says Crown-owned Polymer Corp. Ltd. agreed to bill some European customers "at inflated rates" and then remit the difference to customers or their representatives in Switzerland. The letter was tabled in the Commons by Trudeau.

The prime minister, under intensive questioning in the Commons over allegations that government companies bribed foreign firms to get sales, said he passed the auditor-general's comments on to Charles Drury, then president of the treasury board.

Trudeau conceded under questioning that in the 3½ years since then he has not pursued the matter and there is no record it was ever resolved.

A Swiss subsidiary of Polymer agreed to bill certain European customers "at inflated prices" in order to reduce tax liabilities in their own countries and avoid their countries foreign exchange control regulations, where they exist, the letter says.

Henderson told the prime minister that the extent to which the Crown corporation might be "contingently liable for aiding and abetting such transactions largely depends, of course, on whether the customers concerned are apprehended by their respective national authorities."

While it might be possible to defend the actions from a corporate standpoint, he said, publicity surrounding any charges against a Crown corporation "could have serious and undesirable consequences."

Earlier in the day, Trudeau said that only days after getting the letter, he and the minister involved — the then treasury board president Charles Drury — sought an explanation of what the prime minister described as "questionable invoicing practices."

A spokesman for Drury said the former minister will not be available to comment until Tuesday.

Henderson is expected to be called before the Commons public accounts committee to outline what evidence he has that bribes were paid.

He will also be asked why the issue of the rebates was handled in a private letter to the prime minister rather than in his annual report. The auditor-general is an employee of Parliament and is supposed to report to the Commons.

Committee chairman Allan Lawrence (PC — Northumberland-Durham) says he will seek permission to subpoena documents and ministers to get to the bottom of the issue.

After Henderson said in a newspaper interview that he had reported cases of bribery by government-owned companies, the prime minister first told reporters — and repeated in the Commons — that he had been unable to turn up any such communication from Henderson.

T. C. Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) said the whole matter smacked of illegality and immorality "and somebody could be charged with aiding and abetting fraud."

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said it was a phony argument for Trudeau to say that only questionable accounting procedures were involved because "there's also a clear question of possible illegality."

He told reporters he considered Mr. Trudeau's statements "transparent nonsinse."

"It just shows that those who do not desire to see wrongdoing will close their eyes to it," he said. "The whole thing stinks of fraud."

GRITS THIRD IN POLL

A sample survey of federal Liberals have slipped to third place in popularity, behind the New Democratic Party, voters in B.C. shows the while Progressive Conservatives maitain a strong lead.

Dan Koenig, sociologist at the University of Victoria, said 599 replies from a representative sampel of people on the federal voters lists across the province show 44 per cent supporting the federal Conservatives.

The replies, received in September and October, prior to the current controversy over the auditor-general's report, show 18.4 per cent support the NDP while the Liberal backing has dipped to 15.9 per cent.

The latest survey is one in a series over the past four years asking, among other questions: "if another federal election were held today, for which political party's candidate would you vote?"

In April this year the results were: PCs 44.2; Liberals 20; NDP 17.7; Social Credit 5.4 and uncommitted 12.7.

In February the results were: PCs 36.2; Liberals 24.4; NDP 16.3; Social Credit 5.8 and uncommitted 17.4.

One Dead, Three Hurt After Wild Car Chase

One youth is dead and four others are in hospital after a wild drinking and car-stealing escapade ended in a two-car collision near Nanaimo Thursday morning.

Nanaimo RCMP said the dead youth and three companions suspected of ramming a stolen car through the Langford liquor store earlier in the day, were travelling in a stolen car that collided with another vehicle eight miles north of Nanaimo at 9 a.m.

One person in the other vehicle was taken to hospital with a suspected broken arm while two passengers escaped injury.

Police are withholding all names pending notification of next of kin. All of the youths in the car that was chased are 17 or 18 years old.

A spokesman said the car containing the four youths had been pulled over in Nanaimo after it sped through a police radar trap. As the officer approached, the car suddenly took off.

A chase at speeds up to 80 miles an hour ensued but the officer decided to back off because of the erratic way the youth's car was being driven.

"The officer radioed in he was abandoning pursuit," the spokesman said. "He said he was afraid if he kept up the chase someone would get killed."

The spokesman said the police car was following well behind with it's red-light flashing, when the pursued vehicle swerved over into the oncoming lane as it rounded a curve and skidded into the other car.

Police said the car being chased had been reported stolen from a garage in Cobble Hill earlier in the morning.

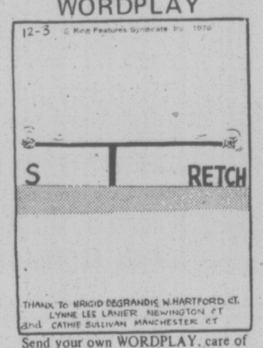

Police also found another car which had been reported stolen from Victoria earlier in the day.

NO INCREASE FOR AUTOPAC

WINNIPEG (CP) — There will be no general rate increases in 1977 for vehicles or drivers, Peter Burtniak, minister responsible for the Manitoba Public Insurance Corp., announced today.

The minister said the past fiscal year was one of the best in the five-year history of the compulsory automobile insurance operation, known as Autopac, and a surplus of about $14 million is anticipated.

AIRLINE BILKED

MONTREAL (CP) — Using a flaw in Air Canada's ticketing system, a 24-year-old employee bilked the company of at least $115,000 by illegally selling tickets at reduced prices, police said today.

Det.-Sgt. Roger Ratelle of the Montreal police fraud squad said the employee, working at Dorval airport, sold tickets for prices ranging from half to 90 per cent of their value.

After selling a ticket, he would destroy all evidence of a transaction and keep the money, the detective said, adding that the employee also gave some tickets away to friends.

Halloween Shooter Fined $100

Shooting into the air is no way to celebrate Halloween, a Saanich man learned Thursday when he was fined $100 in Victoria provincial court and banned from possessing firearms.

Judge Blake Allan fined Reginald William Hayward, 36, of 85 Cadillac, for firing five shots into the air from the back porch of his house.

The boy had been out collecting sweets in the 3100-block Wascana when the bullet hit.

Hayward told court he realized that he had done a stupid thing and he had already told Saanich police he didn't want anything to do with that revolver from now on.

He then issued two separate orders, one prohibiting Hayward from owning a firearm, other than hunting rifles, for 12 months and another turning the revolver over to Saanich police.

The incident, he said, showed how badly gun control laws are needed.

Lang Sees No Wrong

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Transport Minister Otto Lang says he saw nothing wrong in seeking passage to Europe on an Armed Forces plane for his Scottish nanny, but Defence Minister Barney Danson thought otherwise and asked his colleague to drop such plans.

Danson told reporters Thursday he "suggested to Lang that the nanny travel another way" when advised that she was booked on such a flight to Scotland for last night.

Lang's wife Adrien said she is fed up.

"This appears to be get Otto Lang year," she said Thursday. "But I didn't think it was going to last all year.

"I have had it," she declared.

The Toronto Sun disclosed Wednesday that Lang, already under fire for spending $750,000 over three years in free government flights, planned to send the Scottish nanny back home by DND aircraft.

The Lang's had brought her to Canada the same way about a year ago.

A replacement was to be flown to Canada on a later free defence department flight.

The end result of the incident is that the nanny, 21-year-old Elizabeth MacGillivray, was to leave via Air Canada and Lang was chastized once more in the Commons for his use of government planes.

The minister said having a nanny to care for his children, the Langs have seven, "frees us to do more work and put in extra long hours."

"For that reason," he added, "I felt it was fair in this case."

Danson said that troops on duty have first priority aboard military flights overseas.

Dollar Drops

Times News Services

Bankers in Montreal said today that the decline of the Canadian dollar to below parity with the U.S. one for the first time in 11 months reflects a growing investor concern over the Canadian economy.

The decline started Thursday when the Canadian dollar hit $0.9998 at the close. Today at noon in Montreal, it was trading at $0.9955.

The slide will continue until the Canadian dollar is trading at 97 cents U.S., according to bank estimates in Montreal. New York brokers fear the slide could carry on until the Canadian dollar is only worth 86 cents U.S.

Dealers in the U.S. said there was steady commercial Canadian dollar selling Thursday which they described as exceptional for the U.S. Thanksgiving Day holiday.

U.S. analysts also blamed lower yields for Canadian treasury bills and Prime Minister Trudeau's speech Wednesday night as other reasons for the higher U.S. dollar.

They said Mr. Trudeau's comments on the Quebec election did little to inspire confidence in the Canadian government.

UIC Premiums Cut 9%

OTTAWA (CP) — The amount of money people pay into the government's unemployment insurance program will be reduced Jan. 1 by nine per cent, Manpower Minister Bud Cullen announced Thursday.

Cullen said the reduction will be $250 million.

The announcement came as Statistics Canada reported the amount paid out in unemployment insurance for the first nine months of 1976 totalled $2.607 billion, up six per cent from the total for the same period last year.

With unemployment continuing at high levels and despite a program designed to cut abuses, it is likely benefits paid will set a record again this year. Last year, benefits totalled more than $3 billion.

Net amount of benefits paid in September was $217 million, down 11 per cent from August and eight per cent from Sepember, 1975.

Cullen said the current weekly premium rate for employees will be reduced to $1.50 from $1.65 for every $100 of insured earnings.

The premium weekly rate for employers will be reduced to $2.10 from $2.31 per $100 insured earnings.

The government can afford to reduce the premiums because of savings within the unemployment insurance system. Recent changes have knocked some unemployment insurance recipients off the list, he said.

Strong Earthquake Rocks Northern California Coast

Times News Services

A strong earthquake rumbled through a broad coastal zone of northern California early today, the University of California seismographic laboratory reported. There were no immediate reports of injuries or damage.

The tremor measured 5.8 on the Richter scale of quake intensity, the laboratory said.

A spokesman said the quake occurred at 12:20 a.m. with an epicentre at Ferndale, 15 miles south of Eureka.

An earthquake of 5 on the scale can cause considerable damage in populated areas and 6 can case severe damage. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 registered 8.25 on the Richter scale.

In Turkey, meanwhile, relief workers struggled through snow and over destroyed roads today to help thousands of earthquake victims. Local officials said 3,027 bodies had been recovered in the area and expressed fear that the death toll may approach 4,000.

The grief-striken survivors of Muradiye spent a second night outdoors in sub-zero temperatures. Mevlut Sivasoglu, the township's acting governor, said tents, blankets and fuel were desperately needed to ease the suffering of the survivors, many of them injured.

Force Won't Save Canada: PM

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The will of the people to live together is the only safeguard of Canadian unity and neither force nor referendums will alter that, according to Prime Minister Trudeau.

If the people don't want to stay together, their minds will not be changed by force or even by an act of God Trudeau told a news conference Thursday.

Relaxed and frank, the prime minister explored the Scenarios made possible by the election of the Parti Quebecois and imparted the message that the fate of Canada will not be resolved by the numbers game of referendums.

Trudeau also repeated his arguments against separatism saying that dividing a country like Canada was "logically untfiinkable" and "politically unworkable."

There was a certain logic to a suggestion that Ottawa hold a national plebiscite if a Quebec referendum in two years produced a vote for separatism, he added.

Although "hypothetical", the situation would demand that the other provinces be asked what they felt about unity and the place of Quebec in Canada.

It was "like a marriage," you have to ask both parties if they want a divorce.

If a Quebec referendum produced a huge majority in favor of separation, it would be "constitutionally illegal," he said, adding that this wasn't the point.

"There is a state in the life of a nation where it can no longer survive as a nation," Trudeau added, noting that the same forces had ended the life of empires.

"If a country wants to divide absolutely I am not on the side of those who say we will hold it together by force," he said.

Tory leader Joe Clark, meanwhile, warning Canadians against "complacently ignoring" the threat of separatism, outlined a plan to save confederation that he hopes to put into effect as prime minister.

Speaking to the Canadian Club of Ottawa, Clark said he would begin by reviewing with all provincial premiers those areas in which duplicate, competitive or overlapping federal and provincial programs can be sorted out.

Hopefully, he said, this could be done "to the benefit of those millions of Canadians who pay taxes to both provincial and federal governments, and who in the end are the sole supporters of both."

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS:

3 SNIP not snap. Since not everybody is able to snap garden twine, SNIP is more universally apt.

5. RESORTS not reports. Visiting certain RESORTS, your interest, when you look them over, is in the places themselves. On the other hand, when you scan reports, you aren't being informed "about them" (the reports); your interest is in what the reports are dealing with.

9. TONE not tune. "TONE" links up better with the idea of assessment of quality. Where a tune's concerned, it's just a question of whether you like it.

12. ROAR not soar. They certainly ROAR into the air; but they don't or needn't "soar" (mount high in the air) actually when they take off.

13. SAD not sap. If he is SAD, she too is SAD. She wouldn't think her sweetheart a "sap."

14. DUET not diet. In music (DUET), one has so-called "easy" pieces, as opposed to other more exacting to perform. This idea of a thing possessing inherent difficulty, applies less naturally to a diet.

15. BOSS not loss. There can be little doubt that a self-employed man does his best to avoid a severe loss, so the question of "if" a man is already doing his best applies rather in the case of a man working for a BOSS

20. ACE not ice. Specifying "by a person watching tennis" has more point for an ACE (service) than an ice (refreshment).

21. SINGER not sinner. The insertion of "SINGER" makes better use of the clue's word "poor," in connection with the call for improvement (in which respect a "poor SINGER" is no different from simply a sinner.

22. STAR not spar. Co-STARs should be well matched so as to complement each other's performance, but it may hardly matter if men who spar in the gym — perhaps just for fun or for practice — are not in the same class.

23. CAT not fat. "Although" a girl is a spiteful little CAT, she may have some redeeming charm. There is no reason why the fat girl shouldn't be entirely charming.

CLUES DOWN'

1. BEACHES not peaches. The peaches are regarded as a product, export, etc., rather than as a possession of California — which indeed "has" some very nice BEACHES.

2. JOINT not point. It is easy to think of objects which have an essential weakness because they are JOINTed. The point," on the other hand, is not so much a "part" of a pointed object as the shape of it.

4 PRESENTED not prevented. Since there is no reason why the worker should have any interest in difficulties that never come to exist (since they are prevented at managerial level), PRESENTED is the more reasonable answer.

8. BATS not hats or mats. Since appearance is usually of prime importance in hats and mats, the moderate phrase "not to be ignored" (i.e., worthy of some attention) suits (baseball) BATS better.

11. TALKING not tacking. There's a certain style of TALKING associated with seamen (even if they don't generally use it). On the other hand, tacking in the sailing sense (hardly "a certain way" of tacking) is associated with the sport of yachting, rather than with mariners.

16. CAST not case. A "big" theatrical CAST may well include a number of minor names you can't be bothered to read, but a court case is no less interesting for being a big one.

I frequently receive letters asking my opinion on articles which are so specialized that almost no one could put a figure on them even though they are obviously rare and interesting.

One such letter comes from Mrs. Kidd of New Westminster, who has a swagger cane which belonged to a sergeant major in the Royal Scots Guards regiment stationed in India in the late 1800s. It has a silver top embossed with carvings of an elephant, a tiger and a palm trees.

I am sure any collector of military regalia would love to have it, but frankly I would not care to guess if it is worth $20 or $200. There are so many one-of-a-kind items like this that I sometimes despair of being able to come up with the answers to such questions.

And while on the subject of readers' letters, may I say again that I will help with information and approximate values where I can do so without being misleading, but I NEVER tell readers where and how they can dispose of their treasures. The want-ad section of this newspaper is almost certainly your best bet.

Mrs. Flannigan of S. Burnaby asks about a First World War plate with a picture of two soldiers in a bomb crater and the words, "Well, if you know of a better 'ole, go to it." On the back is printed "Made by the girls of Staffordshire during the winter of 1917 when the boys were in the trenches fighting for liberty and civilization." It was made by Grimwade.

The design is based on a drawing by the most famous of British wartime cartoonists, Bruce Bairnsfather — and this was the most famous of his sketches and, therefore, the most frequently reproduced. It would be interesting to military collectors but not, I think, valuable.

Charles Finch of North Van asks if old military medals are valuable and where can he get more information.

The subject is a huge one. Every country has its medals for every war and every kind of service. I doubt if there is any one book which lists them all, and if there is, it must be the size of an encylopedia. Canadian armed forces medals are naturally the most popular here, and even the most commonplace of war medals would fetch $5 or more. Like anything else, rarity counts. Medals bestowed for bravery are likely to be kept in the family, and the few that do come on the market would fetch a substantial price indeed.

Military medals are frequently handled by coin dealers who also carry catalogues and price guides on Canadian issues.

Sesame Street in 8th Season

The show will return with several "new teaching goals and some new hosts."

Health practices, expanded pre-reading skills, and increased emphasis on the role of women are among the elements that will be added in the 1976-77 season. New effect, or emotional skills will be taught, and last year's special segments for mentally retarded children will be expanded to include self-help skills.

On March 11, Sesame Street will reach a new landmark when it broadcasts its 1,000th program.

Executive Producer Jon Stone describes the new season as "exciting in every aspect and one of the most ambitious in terms of new content we ever have had." He stresses that many of the newer additions, like earlier innovations, are experimental. "What we learn each year provides knowledge for future seasons," he added.

Alaine Reed, singer and actress, will join the cast in the role of Olivia, Gordon's sister. Singer Buffy Ste. Marie, who appeared in several programs last year, will be back, as will Linda Bove of the Little Theatre of the Deaf. These three women will be regular performers. In addition, singer/composer Judy Collins will appear on the street occasionally, and in several of the on-location segments shot on New York's City Island.

Sesame Street has been criticized for not having enough women on the program, and for showing them in stereotyped roles. "We continue to review the role of women on the series," says associate research director Lewis Bernstein. "And this season will pose several additional alternatives to traditional career roles." For example, Ms. Reed will portray a professional newspaper photographer.

Vocabulary development and sight phrases represents a major addition to the show's teaching of cognitive skills, and are designed to sharpen pre-reading skills.

In vocabulary development, the effort will be to develop a child's sense of word play and, at the same time, attempt to teach the meaning of new words. Sight phrases to be introduced in both English and Spanish will be words that children encounter frequently.

The health practices to be introduced will be simple activities that children can perform unassisted to maintain their health and thus exert control over themselves and their environment. In addition, they might encourage child/parent interaction in these practices.

Among the practices to be presented are: dental care (including tooth brushing and the eating of a well balanced diet); exercise; and personal hygiene habits.

Some new elements of affect behavior also will be taught, such as coping with loss of security, issues of peer and sibling revalry, and maintenance of self esteem. The goals of affect behavior continually has expanded over the years. Producer Dulcy Singer points out:

Sesame Street has received more than 100 awards, and this year earned its eleventh and twelfth Emmys.

Canadian People Theme in Parade

The annual Grey Cup Parade will be featured on television, channels 2, 6 and 8, Saturday, Nov. 27 at 11 a.m.

Also Saturday, at 9 a.m. on channels 2 and 6, there will be a replay of last year's championship game between Edmonton Eskimos and the Montreal Allouettes.

The game will be broadcast Sunday on channels 2, 6 and 8 at 10 a.m.

The theme for this year's parade is Great Canadian People and Parade Marshall Ginette Reno will be joined by a host of sports personalities, 30 colourful floats, clowns, 20 marching bands and 13 majorette groups from across the country.

Among those scheduled for appearance in the parade, which takes ninety minutes to view from any one point, are: Whipper-Billy Watson and Timmy, Olympic Medalist John Wood, swimmer Cindy Nicholas, pro athletes from Toronto's baseball, football, soccer and hockey teams, the Big and Little Brothers of the Year and such folk characters as Pigskin Pete from Hamilton and Pemmican Pete from Regina.

Winding its way through 1.6 miles of fun-filled streets in Toronto, the Grey Cup Parade will attract an estimated crowd of almost 400,000 people with an additional television audience estimated at almost three-and-a-half million.

GREAT RACE ON 8

It's to be featured on Channel 8, "Wide World Of Sports" Saturday, Nov. 27, at 4 p.m. From all across Canada, adventurers will canoe, fly kites, play tennis, sail, walk or whatever to start the Great Canadian Race at the C.N.E. in Toronto. Eight days later they will arrive at Man and His World in Montreal.

The objectives of this race are to create harmony and goodwill amongst individuals, companies and countries; to generate a source of revenue for various charitable foundations and amateur athletic organizations; and to provide an outlet for the carefree and adventurous spirit that lurks within everyone. Entrants will pay a fee of $20 for eight days of "anything goes."

Prizes will be awarded in six different categories: Ecology, Comfort, Ingenuity, Whimsy, Hoodwinking, Antique.

Each category is then divided into classes: Class A—non-motorized participants, Class B—motorized participants, Class C—separate races for bicycles, foot, canoe and hot air balloon entrants.

Thirty-six winners from Classes A and B will be reduced to six finalists by using comprehensive series of point totals. They will be joined by the four winners of Class C and the overal winner selected by the official judges and a popular phone-in vote.

All contestants will be expected to travel 35-40 miles per day, with nightly stop-overs at six Ontario sites and one Quebec site.

The greatest obstacle which contestants will have to overcome is being sidelined by severe bouts of laughter.

SPOTTY PICTURES

Dust is one of the prime causes of quality loss in prints. On negatives and condensers dust causes white spots to appear on prints, and on enlarging lenses it causes loss of sharpness.

The first step in its elimination is the grounding of your enlarger; next is to clean your negatives with an anti-static cloth or film cleaning fluid; and your lenses with lens cleaner and tissue. Keep the area clean with damp cloth and mop treatment. If dust persists, hang a sheet of plastic on one wall. The plastic will attract and hold the dust. Wipe it down with a damp cloth once a week.

3 Channels Air Grey Cup Game

Unpredictability has been the key note in the 1976 CFL Football season. This adds to the excitement and interest in the climax of the 1976 season when the Grey Cup game is played at the Exhibition Park in Toronto Sunday between Saskatchewan Roughriders representing the west and Ottawa Rough Riders representing the east.

The game will be televised on channels 2, 6 and 8 at 10 a.m.

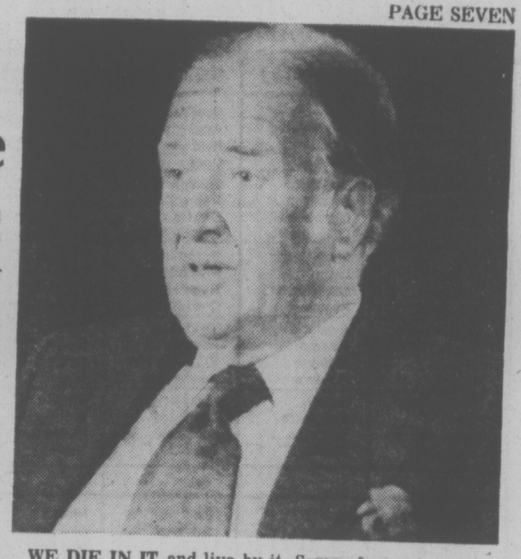

Amid the excitement, fun and furious activities surrounding Grey Cup week, a lot of people are asking the question — What is the Grey Cup?

It is the honoured and coveted trophy awarded annually for football superiority in the Canadian Football League and since 1909 when Earl Grey, the governor-general of Canada, donated the cup it has been the target that every player aims for and hopes to win at least once in a lifetime.

First donated as a trophy for the Rugby Football Championship of Canada, it has subsequently become known as the Grey Cup. Originally it was only open to competition for teams registered with that rugby union.

It has been lost and found, stolen and returned and saved from fire, so in the 1960's the CFL retired the venerable stirling to the Football Hall of Fame in Hamilton—A replica is used for all public ceremonies.

Although the West entered the Cup challenge in 1921 it wasn't until 1948 when the Calgary Stampeders became involved that Grey Cup week took on the colour and excitement that it has carried to this very day.

WE DIE IN IT and live by it. Some of us eat, pray, bank, or simply find solitude in it. The automobile — has made Henry Ford (above) powerful and rich, and has totally influenced the way we live in the twentieth century. Ford and our car culture are the subject of the upcoming CBC-TV documentary special by Donald Brittain, titled, Henry Ford's America, to be telecast Sunday, Nov. 28 at 10 p.m.

Talking Dog Stars

In the midst of such distinguished company as movie stars, singers and show business celebrities, it's difficult for a shaggy dog to stand out in the crowd. But if one wants to be heard, he must say something. And that's exactly what this dog does!

This conversing canine plays the title role in Disney's latest comedy, "The Shaggy D.A.," and is featured when "The Wonderful World of Disney" pays a one-hour tribute to "Disney's Greatest Dog Stars" on Sunday on Channel 2 at 6 p.m. and on 5 at 7 p.m.

Actually, the voice behind the Shaggy D.A. belongs to Dean Jones. But not only does the versatile light comedian talk for the dog, he is the dog. And both the man and his dog run off at the mouth while running for public office.

"I play a crusading lawyer who's running for district attorney," said Jones. "The campaign hits a snag when I turn into a dog. Even so, I keep on hounding those crooks in city hall."

SUSAN WATSON stars in Honour Thy Father a powerful and deeply disturbing drama about the tragic confrontation between a Greek immigrant and his daughter who spurns deep-rooted tradition by falling in love with a man of her own and not her family's choosing. Louis Zorich and Barbara Chilcott play her parents. Honour Thy Father will be seen on Here To Stay, Sunday, November 28 at 9 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

Quarter Century For Lucille

Lucille Ball's durable talents have set the pace of television comedy for two-and-a-half decades since the debut of "I Love Lucy" in 1951, one of the longest-running and most popular programs of all times.

Sunday, November 28, at 8 p.m., channels 7 and 8 will feature "The Lucille Ball 25th Anniversary Special," a two-hour extravaganza honouring this lovely lady of remarkable talent who, among all those who have attempted to bring to an anxious world the sheer pleasure of uncomplicated laughter, has been undoubtedly the most successful.

A retrospective of Lucille Ball, her career and her contributions to television, this special features guest appearances by those who remember her best and they offer brief reminiscences of their personal and professional friendships through the intervening years.

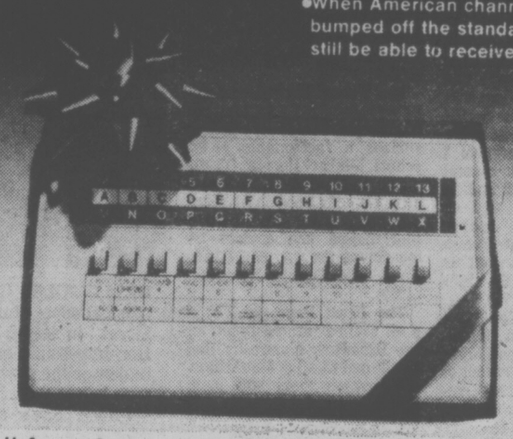

Appearing to honour her on this anniversary event will be Desi Arnaz Sr., Milton Berle, Carol Burnett, Richard Burton, Sammy Davis Jr., Gale Gordon, Bob Hope, Danny Kaye, Dean Martin, Danny Thomas, Vivian Vance and John Wayne. In addition the singing voices of Steve Lawrence and Frank Sinatra will be a highlight in the program.

The major portion of the program will consist of film and videotape reprises of memorable performances by Lucy in some of her four series, specials and guest appearances on other shows over an unprecedented quarter century of continuous stardom.

Heroic Battle Recalled

The true story of the Royal Navy's Operation Chariot, which Winston Churchill cited as a key success of The Second World War, is told in a BBC-TV documentary, "The Raid on St. Nazaire," presented on Channel r "After Football Special," Monday, Nov. 29, at 10 p.m.

At midnight on March 27, 1942, a combined force of Royal Navy sailors and British Commandos sailed up the River Loire under heavy fire from German shore batteries. Their objective: to destroy the giant Normandie dock at St. Nazaire, prospective Atlantic base for the dreaded battleship Tirpitz.

The mission, which produced five Victoria Crosses and 78 other medals for valor, is recalled through newsreel and archive film, along with the first-person account of a survivor, former Commando Captain Michael Burn.

"The Raid on St. Nazaire" was co-produced by BBC-TV and ORTF, the French national broadcasting network.

CBC Series Features Trower, Logger-Poet

The logging poetry of B.C. writer Peter Trower will be the basis of a film to be shown on "Pacific Prime Time" series at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Nov. 29th on Channel 2.

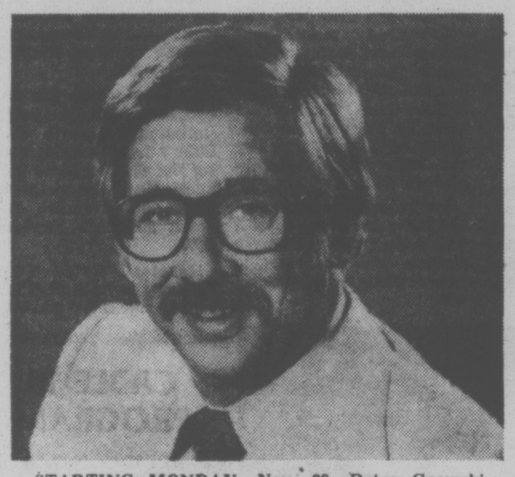

Titled, "Between the Sky and the Splinters" after one of Trower's three books, the film combines Trower's reading of his own poems with filmed portrayals of his experiences in 15 years as a logger.

Trower, who now lives at Gibsons, B.C., went to work in the woods in 1949, just in time to see the end of the storied days of B.C. logging. He witnessed the passing of the last handfallers, the A-frames, the steam donkeys, the wooden spar trees and the hay-wire gyppos.

To make the film, CBC producer Mike Poole took Trower back to many of the up-coast camps where he had worked. They found Minstrel Island, where loggers from nearly 30 gyppo camps once gathered to drink and brawl, now nearly deserted and the beer parlour locked.

They filmed at one of the last authentic float camps at Shawl Bay near Simoon Sound, where two giant A-frames still tower over the bay and they travelled to Glendale Cove on Knight Inlet to photograph the snow-flattened remains of a camp where more than 200 men had worked in the 1950's.

"Between the Sky and the Splinters" was photographed by John Seale and Roy Luckow, with editing by Norma Jackson and sound by Mike Oldfield. The film was shown earlier this year on CBC television, but has been recut for "Pacific Prime Time."

STARTING MONDAY, Nov. 29, Peter Gzowski (above) hopes to bring new energy and immediacy into late night Canadian television viewing with the beginning of 90 Minutes Live on CBC-TV. The program, which will be seen weeknights at 11:30, will offer a lively blend of topical journalism, talk and a wide range of entertainment.

Facts Support Play

A young girl finds her first job and her first romance — with the young Communist leader of a small, pathetic band of striking garment workers — in "The Great Cherub Knitwear Strike," a bittersweet love story to be presented on Visions, Monday, Nov. 29 at 9 p.m. on 9.

The play is set during the Great Depression, and Ruth Schwartz (Kathy Beller), the winner of her high school's achievement award, must find a job to support the family. Her stepfather (Wil Albert) is an out-of-work garment worker, and the family is rejected for Home Relief after grandmother (Frances Cheney) throws an officious investigator out of the apartment.

The family is ecstatic when Ruth finds a $12, six-day-a-week office job at a knitwear company owned by Mr. Genselhejmer (Leon Askin). There she falls in love with Bernie Heller (Adam Arkin), a serious young Communist who wants "to change the whole basis of human relationships."

Bernie leads a strike of four elderly women — joined by a worshipful Ruth — when the salary is cut. The strike lasts only a week.

Largely autobiographical, "The Great Cherub Knitwear Strike" was written by Ethel Tyne and directed by her husband George.

EMMY AWARD-WINNING actor-comedian Ted Knight, who is seen regularly as news anchorman Ted Baxter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," plays host to a half dozen top stars on "The Ted Knight Musical Comedy Variety Special Special," to be broadcast Tuesday, Nov. 30 at 8 p.m. on Channel 12.

Ted Knight Takes Sentimental Trip

He also found that comedy, in his old home town, is no laughing matter.

He re'learned so many things about his native community and its people, as a matter of fact, that he created a show around them and called it "The Ted Knight Musical Comedy Variety Special Special."

Tadewurz Konopka is the real name of the Emmy Award-winning actor-comedian who is seen as news anchorman Ted Baxter on "the Mary Tyler Moore Show." Last spring, Knight returned to his native Terryville, Conn., after an absence of many years to receive the town's honors as its Man of the Year. That trip, translated into a comedic odyssey, is the basis of Knight's first starring special. With a little help from his friends, Edward Asner, Rue McClanahan, Ethel Merman, Phil Silvers, Loretta Swit and special guest Fred MacMurray, Knight will recreate his Terryville triumph Tuesday might on Channel 12 at 8 p.m.

"As a comedy character, I'm used to being laughed at," Knight said. "In Terryville, everybody cried when they saw me. That took some getting used to!"

Most of his old friends in the largely Polish community had not seen "littel Tadewurz" for a very long time, and they reacted to the reunion with characteristic emotion. "First they cried," Knight recalls, "and then they started cooking. We ate all the time. We went from one home to another, cutting up old touches and old recipes. It was a truly fullfulling experience."

Many of the events that are given comedy treatment in the special actually took place during his visit. There was, indeed, a parade. There was a testimonial dinner, attended by the mayor and various local dignitaries. There were the nostaligic visits to the old homestead, to the old schoolhouse and other sentimental safaris.

"We treat it with laughter in the special," Knight says, "but it's warm, loving laughter. I think that comes through in the show."

Auction 'Success'

"The first ever public television Auction for KCTS/9 was, by every stretch of the imagination, a resounding success," Dr. Richard J. Meyer, General Manager of Channel 9 announced today. The total amount raised was $208,578, which includes sales, underwriting and cash donations.

Over 2,000 volunteers worked on the seven-day event, which was held at Doces Southcenter Furniture Warehouse in Tukwila. In addition, over 100,000 viewers in Washington State and British Columbia bid on the 3,000 items donated by area merchants and businesses. Many more viewed the telecast just for entertainment. The Channel 9 Auction was broadcast live for 59 hours between November 8 and November 14. During this time, items ranging in value from a $25 skateboard to a $10,000 Japanese tea house were sold to the viewers calling in the highest bid.

Where Are They Today?

HOLLYWOOD — For the first time since he invented the thing, Don Ameche is promoting the telephone nationwide.

Ameche didn't truly sire Ma Bell's child, of course, but in the 1930s he played its inventor, Alexander Graham Bell, so effectively that jokes about his relationship to the telephone have circulated ever since.

So, when the Bell System needed an advance man to plug "Jubilee!" — a 90-minute television special it sponsored over NBC celebrating the telephone's 100th birthday — Ameche automatically came to the corporate mind.

So the debonair actor whose first nationwide recognition came from an NBC Radio show, "Empire Builders," was associated with the network again; though on a temporary and indirect basis.

Frankly, Ameche says, he's surprised that the telephone company hadn't summoned him before to push its services, because for some reason the public continues to identify him with Alexander Graham Bell.

"I really think it's an accident that people remember me better as Alexander Graham Bell than as some other character I've played."

Ameche not only thinks it odd that he's so well remembered as Alexander Graham Bell in the film of that name, he thinks it's equally strange how little the public remembers his fellow performers in the drama.

"People don't automatically associate Loretta Young with Alexander Graham Bell," he mused, "and she was the female lead.

"And most people don't remember at all that Henry Fonda was in the picture. He played my assistant, Watson, the one to whom I said, 'Mr. Watson, come here; I want you.'"

This cry to Watson was the first telephone conversation, a command the genuine Bell impulsively transmitted through the gadget he'd just invented when he accidentally spilled acid on himself.

While the public may have fancied Ameche most as father of the phone, his personal favorite of the pictures he made was a fluffy, frolicsom film called "Heaven Can Wait," directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

"That's why I liked it so well," Ameche said, "Because of Lubitsch. He had a very special touch."

The plot was a perfect vehicle for the exercise of Lubitsch magic, the naughty story of a rake who's sure he's bound for hell because of his spicy romatic escapades but who, in the denouement, is directed to heaven "because you've made so many women happy."

DON AMECHE

While the picture was not so inspirational as "Alexander Graham Bell" nor so tuneful as "Alexander's Ragtime Band" (another popular Ameche movie), it not only had a merry script and Lubitsch at the helm but a strong cast including Gene Tierney, Laird Cregar, Marjorie Main and their like in backup roles.

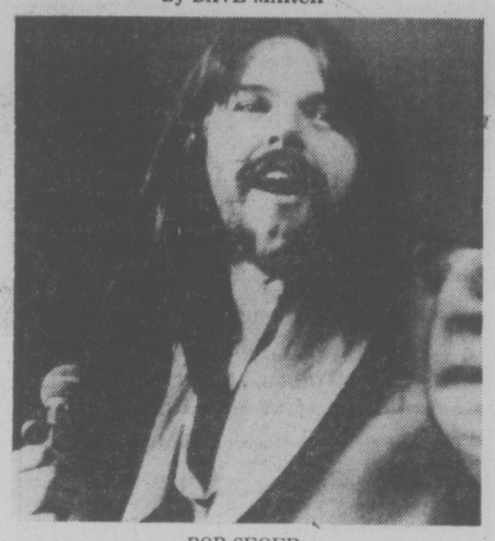

NEW YORK DESIGNER Geoffrey Beene's easy contemporary look is noticeable in loose trousers and top, left, and a crepe de chine evening dress, right.

BOB SEGER

BOB SEGER & THE SILVER BULLET BAND: "Night Moves" (Capital ST-11557).

The raspy-voiced rocker from Detroit is just beginning to hit it nationally, after a decade of trying. "Night Moves" is decidely superior to his other work, particularly for the writing and arranging — the title track is as evocative a ballad as anyone save Rod Stewart has written this season, and 'Rock and Roll Never Forgets' and several others rock powerfully and passionately. 'Mainstreet' and 'Ship of Fools' owe broad debts to Bruce Springsteen and Bob Dylan respecitvely, but Seger's so guileless and emotive in his presentation that it's the song not the source that's memorable. If there's a problem, it's production. The mix is unnecessarily muddy — this is no Phil Spector job, like Springsteen's — and while both the muscle Shoals Rhythm Section and the Silver Bullet boys play well, they're all severely under-recorded. Nonetheless, "Night Moves" ought to be a hit, on the quality of its writing and singing alone.

SUTHERLAND BROTHERS & QUIVER: "Slipstream" (Columbia PC 34376).

"Slipstream" is the most pleasantly propulsive rock and roll to emerge from England (or anywhere else) recently. The lyrics are generally just romantic fodder, but the singing of Iain and Gavin Sutherland is terrific and more than adequately supported by Tim Renwick's inventive guitar (listen to the instrumental, 'High Nights,' which is right out of Johnny and the Hurricanes) and the strong drumming of Willie Wilson. A most pleasant surprise.

JOHN EDWARDS: "Life, Love and Living" (Cotillion SD 9909).

A shocking record. Classic tenor soul is incalculably rare these days, so much so that John Edwards — whose style is reminiscent of both David Ruffin and Ben E. King — seems to stand almost alone in the field. The tracks are disciplined, with some of the flavor but little of the excess of current disco formulae. And the material is good, from the old King hit 'I (Who Have Nothing)' which opens the set to the Barry Mann-Cynthia Weil classic 'Nobody, But You' which closes it. Whoever came up with the idea of teaming Edwards with David Porter (who does the best job he's done since leaving Stax) ought to get a medal.

Baldry is a legend because he fronted an English band 10 years ago which gave, among others, Rod Stewart, Elton John and Julie Driscoll their start. Unfortunately, nothing can compensate for the vicissitudes of fate, which have given Baldry a voice that is simply mediocre. Anybody who can't lend some passion to a song as good as David Baretto's 'What You Never Had to Lose' doesn't deserve to have a hit, no matter who he discovered.

"Live at CBGB's" (ATLANTIC SD 2-508).

The best ammunition for those who doubt that the New York "punk" rock underground is neither particularly punk nor a particularly fertile training ground for future stars is this collection. Two records, eight groups, 16 songs and a big zero in the catchy department.

Donald Walsh, U.S.N., reached the ocean bed 35,817 feet (6.78 miles) down, at 1:10 p.m. on January 23, 1960. The pressure of the water was 16,883 lbs. per square inch, and the temperature 37.4 degrees F. The descent required 4 hours 48 minutes and the ascent 3 hours 17 minutes.

CDS Cell Heart Of Light Meter

By JERRY WINDLE

It wasn't too long ago that some creative camera designer came up with the idea of mounting a light meter onto the camera itself.

The idea was an immediate success. Through the process of evolution, we find today's modern cameras feature, as standard equipment, sophisticated automatic metering systems built right into the viewing mechanism.

It is easy to become solely dependent on the system and let common sense go out the window. For most situations, these meters work fairly well, but there will come the time when your pictures will suddenly be over or under-exposed.

There are three basic types of metering systems: the averaging meter, the centre-weighted meter and the spot meter.

The heart of the automatic system is tiny CDS cells, which read the amount of light entering the camera and relay this information to the meter which translates it into terms of exposure. These cells are powered by tiny batteries within the camera body.

The averaging meter has two CDS cells focused so that each reads half of the picture area. These two readings are then averaged by the system and a single exposure is determined.

In the centre-weighted system, two CDS cells are focused to read only the centre portion of the picture area. Thus this reading will indicate the exposure for that area only.

Any one of these systems can produce satisfactory exposures under normal lighting conditions. However, when the subject presents a marked contrast between light and dark areas, special care must be used by the photographer to obtain the correct exposure.

Since the cells are directed onto the picture area, the choice of lenses will have an immediate effect. If you are using a wide-angle lens, for example, the picture area presented to the cells will be much greater than the area presented by a telephoto lens.

The problem you will find using a wide-angle lens outdoors is that the lens takes in so much picture area, a large part of that area will be sky. The metre will tend to read the sky and indicate a proper exposure for the sky, leaving the rest of your scene under-exposed.

The simplest way to avoid this is to point the camera downward slightly to take your exposure reading and then use that exposure for your picture, if you can manually override the system in your camera. If you can't, avoid getting a lot of blank sky in your pictures. Another trick you can use when shooting pictures, especially of people, is to simply walk right up to the person and take your reading there.

A zoom lens makes an excellent spot metre. Using the lens, you can zoom using the telephoto end to make a close-up exposure reading of your subject, then pull back to the focal length you want to use and make your picture using the close-up exposure. If you don't have a zoom lens, you can do the same thing by changing to a telephoto lens for your reading and then back to the normal lens for making your picture.

As with all battery-powered systems, when the batteries weaken your readings will tend to be off. It is a good idea to check mentally the exposure readings you are getting.

If you are taking what you feel is going to be a better than average picture, bracket your exposures just in case. This will give you a variety of exposures and sometimes a half-stop difference can make or break a picture.

HOLLYWOOD — When Dorothy Lamour auctioned her marvelous collection of antiques and memoribilia, Bob Hope bought the rehearsal piano she'd kept in her Paramount dressing room for $1,000. The piano had been autographed by Hope, Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray and other stars who'd worked with Dottie or had been her buddies during her Paramount contract days. Lamour says she didn't sell her treasures because she needs money but, rather, because many of them had been in storage for years, and many more would have to go into storage soon, since she and her husband are moving into a smaller home — possibly one in Hawaii.

The reading public will get new insight into the personality of William Faulkner through "A Loving Gentleman: The Love Story of Meta Carpenter and William Faulkner" out this month from Simon and Schuster.

Written by Meta Carpenter Wilde, wife of Arthur Wilde, and Hollywood publicist Oren Borsten the book recounts the agonies and ecstacies of a script girl and a famous author who fell in love in 1934 and remained deeply devoted until Faulkner's death in 1962.

Already a Book-of-the-Month-Club selection, the romance may become a movie. And wouldn't it be interesting if Art Wilde were unit publicist on the film?

It should be noted, though, that Mrs. Wilde collaborated on the book with her husband's full approval.

James Whitmore Jr., the Capt. Gutterman of "Baa, Baa Black Sheep," has been writing since he was 13, sold a story to The Atlantic Monthly when he was a senior in high school and would like someday to establish himself as a professional writer.

He got into acting against strong advice from his father, actor James Whitmore, who told him, "Acting is the worst way in the world for a man to make a living."

However, he says, his father is now resigned to the fact that he's working in front of the camera and likes his series.

"My father doesn't like war," young Whitmore says, "but he was in World War II and can identify with aspects of the show."

Though Whitmore Jr. is a working actor and a published author, his most deeply abiding ambition is to raise cane. Literally.

He became acquainted with the Caribbean area when he worked with a reportory company in Trinidad and says, "If I had the financial backing, what I'd like most to do is raise cane in the West Indies."

It's not easy to be neutral about a person like Barbara Frum. The current darling of the CBC has been hosting that network's popular week-nightly radio show, As It Happens, since 1971. To date Frum has conducted some 10,000 interviews on as wide a variety of subjects as the ingenuity of "nine frantic story producers" can supply.

There can hardly be a person left in Canada who has not heard of Barbara Frum by now. Her low-pitched, slangy speech and cosy interviewing style, combined with her ability to switch into high like a badger after a rabbit whenever she scents a good story or has one of her personal prejudices affronted, have made her into a national character.

Now Frum has seen fit to collect some of her "best" interviews into a book. The result is a $10 hard-cover volume titled As It Happened, and if the interviews it contains really are Barbara Frum's "best," then there must be a heck of a lot less to her radio program than meets the ear.

There's one other possible explanation. During a recent television interview arranged to promote her book, Frum stated that if there's one thing she's learned in her current job, it's that "you can't be too cynical." If she means it, the material her book contains could well have been assembled out of an educated and honest contempt for the public taste.

If As It Happened goes into a second printing in its hard cover edition, it'll be a cynic's delight. Because most of these interviews — with people like UFO watchers, religious cultists, food freaks and FBI agents — are pure yellow journalism. They belong, if they belong anywhere at all, in a $1.95 paperback aimed at readers in search of a diversion to relieve the monotony of waiting rooms and travel. Their sensationalism may have relieved the monotony of the daily grind for Frum herself, but the suggestion that they are truly representative of her program, which is often genuinely informative, is laughable.

This said, I must admit that there are some good things about As It Happened. There's Frum's explanation of how the program works. ("I don't talk on a telephone . . . we start our daily chase at noon to accomodate the waking hours of the world . . . for seven hours a day I sit . . . asking questions"). There's an interview with a man who spent six years in a Chinese prison camp and who is treated with the respect due his intelligence and dignity. There's a funny interview with stunt-man Walter Cornelius, a chat with the professor who discovered that women rate sex as their fifth most pleasureable activity, "after housework, just ahead of smoking" and a couple of "conspiracy" stories in chapter two which are really riveting.

The rest of the book consists of better-forgotten junk like a sappy chat with Malcolm Muggeridge about what his wife thinks of him, and an interview with a London journalist about a Japanese operation to "recreate a hymen artificially with sheep gut."

Worst of all are two voyeuristic interviews which "good taste" decreed should not be aired before the public, but which Frum chooses to preserve for posterity in print. Surely, five years and 10,000 interviews could have produced something more worthy than this.

Perhaps the basic problem with As It Happened is not that Barbara Frum's taste is so bad, but rather that she appears to have no taste at all. My mental image of her program, after reading this book which purports to represent "the best" of it, is of a huge garbage dump being enthusiastically picked over by a flock of magpies. It may be no coincidence that one of the cosiest interviews in the book is with A. J. Weberman, who invented the science of "garbology." With this character, Frum really feels at home.

In her introductory remarks to chapter three, "Retailing Bliss," Barbara Frum reveals what may well be the reason for the success of her broadcasting career. "My father was a merchant," she writes, "and a pretty successful one. He made his original stake in the twenties, selling fancy boots and silk shirts to the high-paid riggers and excavators who came to dig the Welland Canal. I don't remember it being deliberate, yet somehow he outfitted me, too. He taught me that you don't buy labels, you don't buy hype, and you always finger the merchandise."

This well-learned lesson has enabled Barbara Frum to mix toughness, shrewdness, and cynicism with her natural wit and femininity. It's a combination that makes her a formidable interviewer and quite possibly a delight to know. But anyone who is thinking of parting with $10 for a copy of her book would be well advised to heed Daddy's warning: "You don't buy labels, you don't buy hype; and you always finger the merchandise."

A Divine Book, Darlings

By PAUL BAILEY

A London railway station buffet. An old actress, amazingly well preserved, enters. She is clutching a copy of Cole Lesley's The Life of Noel Coward. She sees a young actor at a table, deeply absorbed in a book.

SHE: Hullo, darling. Where are you off to?

HE: Darlington.

SHE: Very drab, Darlington.

HE: And you?

SHE: Edinburgh, darling. Quite like civilization, for the most part. I'm in the most dreadful piece. I can't tell you. Shudder-making. I'm playing a nymphomaniac. An ELDERLY nymphomaniac. The one comfort is that I get killed off early on by an utter moron. Still, it pays the rent. Just.

HE: Have a drink.

SHE: Gin and t, darling. With ice, if they don't have to go to Greenland for it. (He puts down his book and goes to the bar. She sits down. He returns with their drinks.)

SHE: We're both reading Coley's book. Isn't it quite divine?

HE: Very entertaining. Correction. TERRIBLY entertaining.

SHE: So beautifully produced. So elegant. Cheers!

HE: Cheers! It was obviously a labor of love.

COWARD . . . the trivia will survive

SHE: Obviously. It brings back so many happy times. So much glamour.

HE: I like the first half best. He's very good on Coward's youth.

SHE: Isn't he? The poor dear nearly starved in New York, you know. He WORKED for his fame, did Noel.

HE: Oh yes. That comes over strongly.

SHE: I was so glad, darling, not to find any shocking revelations.

HE: About his sex life?

SHE: Precisely. He always maintained that was his own business. I must say I'm not amused by all these old gentleman telling us about what they did with their sex organs in the gay Twenties. Quiet unnecessary.

HE: And who cares, anyway? It interested me to read that Coward never enjoyed being in love.

SHE: It made him utterly wretched, darling.

HE: Dare I make some criticisms, though?

SHE: Must you? Dare away then.

HE: Well, I think the book's too long. There's far too much about Coward moving house. There are far too many gibes against critics. Coward's detractors weren't always Fleet Street cruds. There was Graham Greene, and Sean O'Casey and Cyril Connolly. Hardly idiots. And there was T. S. Eliot.

SHE: And when was HE an expert on the rib-tickling, might I ask?

HE: He wrote a fair line or two, even so. Coward WAS a bit of a Philistine, you must admit. But most people are, I suppose. No, my real complaint with the biography is that I sometimes felt I was reading about God the Father and not a talented man of the theatre. But only sometimes. I laughed a lot.

SHE: I should jolly well hope you did.

HE: I loved the stories about Dorothy Parker and John Barrymore. Oh, there are hundreds of hilarious stories.

SHE: Indeed.

HE: Do you know, this book has convinced me that Coward was at his most serious when he was at his most flippant. It's his trivia that will survive. Hay Fever and Private Lives and those splendid songs. His heart was in them, not in This Happy Breed and all the other flag-waving, aren't-we-English-wonderful junk.

SHE: We ARE critical aren't we? He gave us all a boost when we needed it, did Noel. But I think you may be right. I'm sure I'd rather be acting in trivia than the earnest mush I'm off to inflict on the Celts.

HE: May I share the journey with you?

SHE: Only if you're travelling first class. Even though I'm about to appear as an old tart, I still believe in QUALITY.

A Celebration of Age

Those phenomenally successful books of a couple of years ago, The Joy of Sex, and its sequel, More Joy of Sex, were, alas, only of academic interest to me, but I did get a kick out of the fact that they weren't banned in Canada. The reason for this was that the usually vociferous bunch of self-appointed guardians of public morals were muted because they didn't know how to handle the editor of those books, Dr. Alex Comfort.

Such explicitly written, and even more explicitly illustrated books were natural targets for the moralizers but how, they must have asked themselves, do you openly attack a famous, middle-aged medical man, who is an internationally-renowed gerontologist, without literally being laughted out of court?

Those books not only won acclaim for Dr. Comfort from professional colleagues, they also made him a household name to grateful millions who had known about sex in all its beautiful manifold guises, but hadn't dared to admit it openly.

Dr. Comfort is about to be acclaimed by a different constituency, the elderly. The great pioneer gerontologist, in his new book. A Good Age, brushes aside feeble stereotypes and approaches the aging process with a long overdue attitude of vigor, honesty and directness, and with his customary lively turn of phrase and deep perception.

In the course of his book he deals head-on with every conceivable problem, physical and mental, which could beset an elderly person. Here are a few sentences culled at random:

Retirement. Two weeks is about the ideal length of time to retire.

Brain. The human brain does not shrink, wilt, perish or deteriorate with age. It normally continues to function well through as many as nine decades.

Pulling Rank. This is one of the pleasures of age to which you are entitled, so swallow what you have learned about modesty and non-assertion and use it.

Sex. Older people are and always have been sexually active, but they are getting less embarrassed about it as the culture gets less uptight about sexuality generally.

Death. All that "the proximity of death" does to age is to add value to living, reduce our tolerance of triviality and increase our anger with those who, or those attitudes which, cause us to waste a store of time and experience which we cannot afford to dissipate or have destroyed for us.

Doctors. If you find one who thinks that you have to be infirm, crazy, impotent or the like, by virtue of chronological age, change doctors.

Leisure. Leisure is a con. It should mean time to do what you yourself want to do. It gets sold as part of the unperson package, as time in which you are expected to do trivial and useless things for which you have to pay money.

Gerontology. This will not abolish old age; it will make it happen later. The extra years, unless we persist in clock-watching in defiance of all reason, will be years of extra vigor, not dependence. Old age itself will not be longer, only later.

Dr. Comfort sees so-called senior citizens as an oppressed minority who are wrongfully "supposed to be physically and intellectually infirm, slow on the uptake and rigid in their ways."

He says, "There is an urgent need for 'old' people to learn to fight back against hogwash, classification, put-downs and rip-offs which, by virtue of the passage of time alone, society writes into the roles of people who could still be young."

Three cheers for a man who unequivocally repudiates the notion that the onset of middle age marks the beginning of life's downhill phase, and who offers the promise of a better, longer, more active life free of imaginary fears which are all too common, and who defiantly rejects obsolete assumptions that "old" people are helpless, incompetent and useless.

And while we're cheering let's give another one for Michael Leonard for his fine portraits of older people, most of them famous, who do, or did, retain vigor, vitality and a sense of fun. These portraits lend emphasis to Dr. Comfort's point that such achievements can be enjoyed by all if we set our minds to a revolutionary change of attitudes, our own as well as those of society.

As I said before, Dr. Comfort, in providing a blueprint for dignity for people past the physical prime of life, touches on every aspect that might prey on the minds of the elderly. This makes his book (no doubt destined to become a classic) important for anyone apprehensive of growing old or distressed at being old.

I was glad to note that he devotes considerable space to nursing homes, defined by one doctor as "a facility that has few or no nurses and can hardly qualify as a home". Dr. Comfort considers that these institutions now occupy the place of fear for old people which was once occupied by the workhouse.

He suggests picketing by seniors' organizations, not only of bad nursing homes, but also of the houses and offices of politically active citizens who own or have stock in them. He says that "as a retirement occupation it is much to be commended."

I must stress that this invaluable book is not only for those Dr. Comfort calls the now old. "All people, of all ages, need the basic facts," he says. "Those now old need positive strategies. Those not yet called old need to realize what is in store for them if they let things ride."

The warning is loud and clear: "By ignoring an oppressed minority which we are inevitably going to join, we do not realize that we are slashing our own tires."

All now old people can profit greatly by reading this book. And those not yet classified as old can perform a noble service by presenting a copy to an elderly relative or friend. But before doing so they'd be wise to read it themselves.

I counsel this because A Good Age makes marvellous reading. Not only does it examine leisure options, retirement problems, health, sexual activity, bereavement and other questions of profound significance for those who aim to stay youthful with age, it is also one of the most exhilarating examinations of the human condition to appear in many a long year.

A Shift of Power From Aristocrats to Media

By JULIAN REID

Shortly after George McGovern captured the 1972 Democratic nomination for the U.S. presidency, an aide proposed Walter Cronkite as an ideal running-mate. That suggestion was rejected, and Cronkite later stated that in any case he would have turned the offer down — he simply wasn't interested. And why should he be? After all, as Robert Sobel observes wryly, "the vice-presidency would be a downward step for him. Cronkite exercised more power over the nation at CBS than he could in ruling over the Senate."

"Knowledge is power," Francis Bacon asserted three centuries ago. But that power, he neglected to add, inevitably gravitates in the hands of those who process and transmit knowledge — or, in our modern parlance, "information." In this media-dominated age, a George McGovern or a Richard Nixon is a "newsmaker" only by courtesy; it is the Walter Cronkites, the Bob Woodwards and Carl Bernsteins, who possess the real power of, literally, making the news.

In Bacon's day, the nearest equivalents to our contemporary mass-media were the theatre, the pamphleteering press, and the pulpit — the last being the only one that reached more than a fraction of the populace. All three operated under stringent state regulation.

Today the glove is on the other hand. Throughout the Western world, the media have increasingly come to dominate the state. This wholesale shift of power from the old aristocratic elite to a largely middle-class cadre of "mass intellectuals" is among the most significant trends in recent history. The U.S. led the way, and it is there that the process is now approaching its historic culmination.

How did this come about? That is the question historian Robert Sobel addresses in The Manipulators — a readable and informative study which is also, alas, rather misleadingly unbalanced.

Sobel begins with the small-circulation news-sheets of colonial days — the direct ancestors of the 19th century's mass-circulation "penny press," which gave rise to the new caste of professional journalists, "the forerunners and servitors of the emerging mass intellectuals." Then, in the early 20th century, came the first departments of journalism in American colleges, heralds of the dawning era of the "multiversity" and the burgeoning "knowledge industry" devoted to mass-producing the new breed of media producers and consumers.

Woodrow Wilson was the first "media-president." His First World War "Committee on Public Information" (a period euphemism for propaganda) forged permanent links between government and the press. "From that time on journalists would attack and defend government with an eye to power — often official power at that." These links drew tighter under Franklin D. Roosevelt, who made masterful use of the new medium of radio in his famous "fireside chats," and soon established himself as a media-celebrity on a par with such Hollywood idols as Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert.

But the apotheosis of media-man became possible only with television. Both John F. Kennedy and Richard Nixon were largely media-made public figures, prime specimens of the politician-as-celebrity, and their 1960 presidential campaign was "more an audition than a political contest." Even more than Roosevelt, the smiling victor emerged as an authentic superstar.

"The Kennedy years," claims Sobel, "constituted an important watershed in the national life. In this period, the various arts and businesses of communications, entertainment, and information reached a new level of maturity and power; some united, or at least appeared to come together, to form the skeleton for an altered civilization and consciousness."

Increasingly, the small-screen image came to prevail over untelevised raw reality. "Today the substance of an act and the way it is packaged are taken together; they have merged. Information and entertainment have become one. Public life has become a part of show business; politicians have had to become performers." This dominance of the celebrity-politician, Sobel believes, "is the single most important cultural and political force of our times" and harbinger of "the coming high media age, a period in which the lines between reality and fiction are all but obliterated."

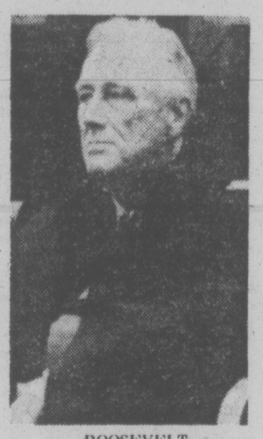

THE MANIPULATORS: America in the Media Age, by Robert Sobel. Doubleday. $11.50.

Persuasive as he makes this argument, it is more than a little misleading. For one thing, "the merger of politics and show business" is by no means a new and unprecedented phenomenon, as practically any account of a 19th century American political campaign will demonstrate. Congressman Davy Crockett was only one of many early specimens of the media-made celebrity-politician.

Moreover, Sobel's overall account of the developing mass-media is seriously unbalanced. He deals exclusively with five — newspapers, the movies, network radio and television, and the proliferating multiversity — ignoring such important fields as book- and magazine-publishing, the recording industry, and the pervasive force of mass-advertising. Nor does he pay much attention to the developments film and radio have undergone since the passing of their Golden Ages a generation ago.

Yet these are the very areas in which one of the most significant current trends in the media is furthest developed: the break-up of the once-homogeneous mass-audience into a multiplexity of overlapping special-interest subcultures. Twenty-five years ago, American life was dominated by a generalized mass-consensus view of reality, shaped largely by NBC, CBS, the major Hollywood studios, and such now-moribund magazine giants as Life and the Saturday Evening Post. But today only commercial television still seriously aims at being all things to all men.

Does this indicate that Sobel's "coming high media age" is already falling apart at the seams? Not necessarily. But it does demonstrate that The Manipulators, for all its virtues, fails to do justice to the real complexity of its theme. Just as there is more to Walter Cronkite than meets the viewer's eye, so there is more to the various media than the message Sobel spells out.

Josh Logan: Portrait of a Theatre Genius

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Over the last couple of years there has been a steady parade of show biz autobiographies, even the least well done of which has had a guaranteed readership potential. People are curious and eager to draw close to what they perceive as the glamorous world inhabited by the Mary Martins and Rex Harrisons, the David Nivens and Raymond Masseys.

One of the most recent, most literate and without doubt most honest, forthright and informative of the group reviews the life to date of America's outstanding stage and screen director - playwright - colaborator, Joshua Logan.

Entitled Josh, My Up and Down, In and Out Life, it is a revelation of genius at work with none of the usual concomitant of overpowering ego. Effortlessly and simply, like an image emerging on a developing negative, it evolves a portrait — better than a portrait, the living personality and presence — of a sensitive, exceptionally gifted human being. The book is illustrated with 60 photographs that trace Logan's career from college-age theatrics to major Broadway and Hollywood associations:

Logan was director and co-author of the play Mister Roberts; director of Annie Get Your Gun, the original with Ethel Merman; director, co-author and co-producer of the original South Pacific; director of Broadway's Camelot, and author, director and co-producer of The Wistaria Trees starring Helen Hayes; director of the films Picnic, Bus Stop, Sayonara, South Pacific, Camelot and Paint Your Wagon among many others.

Logan begins his book with a confession:

"My life and breath is in the theatre. I seem to visualize all existence in theatrical terms. Will dawn go up on time? Will the day be climactic? The night have suspense? . . . My life story itself may seem staged, contrived, even melodramatic — because it was. I was written by a madly irresponsible playwright."

Logan was born in a small Texas town, attended military college, went to Princeton already hooked by childhood excursions to the theatre, became profoundly involved with undergraduate dramatic activity along with people like Henry Fonda, Jimmy Stewart, Bretaigne Windust (who later directed on Broadway Life With Father, Arsenic and Old Lace and Finian's Rainbow among other things), and Myron McCormick.

Logan is altogether candid in discussing the two anguished sessions of manic depression that interrupted his career and could easily have destroyed it if it had not been for the devotion of his wife, Nedda, and his close friends and the intense belief that his brilliant gifts had fostered in his theatre associates.

He admits to a hot temper but comes through to the reader as a warm, sympathetic person who always believes people are going to be just and loyal in their dealings with him. His description of the hard-bitten, cutthroat treatment he received from Rodgers and Hammerstein over South Pacific is a case in point.

He was refused co-author royalties in the show despite hundreds of hours work he had devoted to helping Hammerstein prepare the book and many scene ideas he had contributed. A director's royalties end when the original company closes, an author's percentage goes on forever, and for his family's sake Logan was concerned.

He was urged to have his lawyer approach the collaborators' lawyer in the first place, but "I told him Oscar was my friend and I would handle it myself." And he finishes his summary of the disagreeable business with the comment that, "Dick still had something for me that I could never shake off."

Still, much as he esteemed the exceptional team and obstinately loyal as his nature appears to be, Logan turned down the subsequent Rodgers and Hammerstein offer of full co-authorship and direction of the King and I, a decision he says he will regret for the rest of his life.

Apart from its appealing human qualities, flowing style, fluency of language and insightful discussion of backstage and on-stage action and personalities, Josh provides some nuggets of pure gold for the intelligent theatre participant and student.

Now and then the perceptive camera eye of the creative mind records an impression and we have a clue to what makes Josh Logan successful in both the writing and directing aspects of theatre:

He is on the banks of the Ganges in India and he sees an old man: "His ageless face was universal. The startling thing about him was his gaze as he looked at me . . . We wondered about each other for several moments. It occurred to me that if I was as far removed from him as he was from me, and yet we were both trying to live in the same world, we simply must know more about each other or we were both doomed.

"I thought, I'm in the theatre. I must do a story that would help us know the East and vice versa. And I determined to find one."

Ultimately the story was found. It was James Michener's Sayonara, which concerned the impact of East and West through the medium of Korea GIs and Japanese women. Logan directed it as a film for Warner Brothers with Marlon Brando, Miiko Taka and Myoshi Umeki in the cast.

A Man, A Woman and Their Animals

By LYN HANCOCK

Jacquie Durrell writes well, with wit and keen observation of the wild pets she describes. But her second book, Intimate Relations, mirrors much of what has been previously mentioned in her first book, Beasts in my Bed, or her husband Gerald's popular animal books.

To tell new readers the who, what, when, where and how one has become involved with animals upon marriage, as well as her own version of trips taken with her husband, without alienating old readers by repetition is an understandable difficulty, especially when the Durrells rely on a regular succession of new books to support their Jersey Wildlife Preservation Trust.

Jacquie Durrell's life collecting and rearing wild animals began when she abandoned a singing career and married Gerald Durrell. "General nuisance and chief nagger to her husband", she encouraged him to make money to finance their joint zoo-collecting expeditions by writing radio talks and books about former expeditions.

Jacquie leaves the distinct impression of being "the power behind the throne." In her own words, "To those people, especially women involved with women's rights, who feel that a wife must necessarily always take a back seat in any marriage, I would just like to say that I have certainly not." In fact, she has now decided to add writer to her long list of other activities — "secretary, housekeeper, dogsbody, animal keeper, motor mechanic . . ."

I envy Jacquie Durrell her cool, dispassionate, perhaps typically English attitude of describing each pet's character and personality — pets which include Eggbert the Crested Screamer, Claudius the Tapir, Whiskers the Emperor Tamarin, Cal the Douracoulis, Dingle the Chough, Tikki and Tavi, the Black-footed Mongeese. I can certainly sympathize with the fact that personal involvement with animals is all too often painful. When her favorite pets die, such as Timothy the West African Ground Squirrel, she is supported by the Buddhist theory that "we do not die but merely progress to another life."

But what I miss as a reader is the degree to which she has communicated her involvement. I would like to feel her involvement a little more, to be able to laugh when she laughs and cry when she cries. The obvious problem, of course, is how to do this without becoming overly sentimental. Perhaps a whole book following the trials and tribulations, the fun and the frolic, of a few animals in more detail would satisfy this reader's involvement more in the way Bob Leslie has in The Bears and I.

Stuart Trueman in The Wild Life I've Led describes by means of short, unsentimental but belling anecdotes a variety of animals he has encountered during summers in New Brunswick and winters in Floria.

His style, which won him a Stephen Leacock Medal for humor, is a particular melange of understatement in the manner of Jacquie Durrell, and homely conversationalism with hints of poignancy that give serious undertones to his otherwise seeming levity.

He prattles on affectionately about his experiences with a parade of animal characters that, surprisingly, don't lose their reality despite their cartoon-like presentation — a parakeet that sings off-key, a bat that flattens him in his house at midnight, a bull moose that obeys traffic signals, a duck that spots him an eighth of a mile away and with wings like propellers, "runs on top of the water like a biblical miracle."

It is as much a spoof on people people as it is on animals. When pet raccoons gorged on his son's dehydrated camping supplies, he "fretted over the possibility that when they drank water and the foods began to swell up, we'd hear raccoons popping like punctured balloons all over the place. Nothing happened, which shows Mother Nature must be ahead of the rest of us — she's found a way to install an effective anti-inflation program in every raccoon."

He is sympathetic without being anthropomorphic. At the Suncoast Seabird Sanctuary in St. Petersburg, Florida, he describes how Ralph Heath spends his life rehabilitating birds that have been injured by man — "Guffawing boys who overrun fleeing pelicans with their outboard motorboats. Men who toss giant firecrackers (wrapped in bread) to flying gulls and laughingly watch their heads split. Ghouls who wrap elastic bands around a captured gull's beak or bind its feet. Or the monster who throws handfuls of food to birds. And the next time throws a handful of broken glass."

Durrell fans will enjoy Intimate Relations. Newcomers to the animal reading field will probably prefer The Wild Life I've Led.
